CHAMBERLIN OFF TO BERLIN

CAPT. LINDBERGH SAILS FOR HOME

Today

10,000 to 1, You're Safe.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

[The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune.]

STUDENTS at Oxford worry because women are to teach there. "Isis," read by the Oxford young gentleman, says that will eventually lead to a sex war, and is "a social revolution of the utmost significance."

Women are natural teachers; teaching has been their business from the beginning; teaching children, teaching husbands.

Hypatia, a better mathematician and philosopher than her father, Theon, was one of the greatest teachers that ever lived, until fanatical early Christian monks tore her from her chariot, as she was going to her school, and murdered her, more than 1,500 years ago.

WOMEN make good teachers and excellent judges, as shown by Judge Mary Bartelme in Chicago. All Chicago admires the administration of justice in her court, especially her wise, just, womanly handling of cases affecting wayward girls and women, and all juvenile cases.

The college boy or adult citizen lacking respect for women or confidence in their power, judgment and goodness, pays a poor compliment to his own mother.

THE stock market was busy yesterday in a 2,798,435-share session, and wound up as usual with the professional bear sitting on the dunce's stool. General Motors sold above 201, enthusiasts buying more than 143,000 shares of it.

"NEW Steel," 40 shares given to every holder of 100 old shares, began its Wall Street career selling at 125. Thus the Steel "melon" of $200,000,000 turns out to be worth $250,000,000 today.

Selling things in the United States "short" is a little dangerous.

SETBACKS may come, but remember that we haven't started yet on the road to prosperity. A field depends for fertility on water and fertilizer, a nation on wages and spending power. Labor once got $1. It now gets $5. But don't gamble, you will lose if you do.

UNDER certain circumstances it is hard to know what to say. Mr. Henry Judd Gray, in the death house because he helped Mrs. Snyder to murder the latter's husband, is visited by his wife, who said "How are you?" The ordinary American answer would be "fine and dandy." But you can hardly use that answer in the death house.

Those interested in the "ask me another" pursuit might think up answers for a husband whose wife asks "how are you?" as he sits in the death house.

WE KILL each other less frequently than we did. In 1925 murders amounts to 11 per 100,000 population. In 1926 the United States murder av-

"Chamberlin Will Make it," Predicts U. S. Hero of Skies

CHERBOURG, June 4.—"He'll make it."

This was the prediction of Captain Charles A. Lindbergh when informed by the International News service this afternoon that Clarence Chamberlin had started on a trans-ocean hop.

"He has a good plane and he'll make it," said Lindbergh.

Serenading Band on Launch Makes Gallant Effort Against Rolling of Sea to Produce Music

RYAN AIRCRAFT HEAD IS ABOARD

Aviator Will Spend Most of Voyage in Writing Book Upon Flight Across Atlantic.

CHERBOURG, June 4.—Two weeks after he swooped down from the skies to French soil and world fame, Captain Charles A. Lindbergh, first continent-to-continent flier, headed homeward today.

While thousands cheered the intrepid flier, he stepped off of French soil at 3:25 this afternoon and boarded a tender which transferred him to a launch from the U. S. S. Memphis.

Stands on Deck of Tender.

Lindbergh stood on the flag bedecked tender and waved and saluted to the crowds he left behind him.

Half a dozen launches steamed about the Memphis as she weighed anchor, one launch carrying a serenading band which made a gallant effort against the rolling of the sea to produce patriotic airs.

B. F. Mahoney, president of the Ryan Aircraft corporation, was given permission to sail with Lindbergh on the Memphis, just prior to the ship setting sail.

Captain Lindbergh will spend most of his voyage across the Atlantic in seclusion writing a book upon his flight across the ocean.

Band Plays "Stars and Stripes."

As the "Captain's Gig" from the Memphis came alongside the tender, Lindbergh bade farewell to his French friends and jumped into the tiny American boat which immediately headed for the Memphis, with flags aflutter and the cheers from the shore still audible. The band played "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

Lindbergh was asked by a boatswain where his baggage was and he produced one wooden box. He left

IRONDALE MAN BADLY BURNED IN MINE BLAST

Earl Williams, 34, Brought to City Hospital.

CONDITION GRAVE

Premature Explosion of Powder in Shaft Near Hammondsville.

Earl Williams, 34, Irondale miner, was perhaps fatally burned in a premature explosion of gun powder while preparing a charge in a small coal mine on Big Creek, about one-half mile west of Hammondsville, at 10 o'clock this morning.

He was brought to the City hospital where he was attended by Dr. E. P. Neitz, of Irondale. He was badly burned about the face and may be blind should he recover.

Williams was working alone in the mine when the explosion occurred. He made his way to the mine opening where his cries brought help from a nearby house.

The victim was taken to the office of Dr. Neitz and later removed to the hospital in an automobile.

Williams is married and the father of several children.

STREET CARS HIT BY RAIN STORMS

Street car schedules between East Liverpool and Wellsville were twice interrupted today by the heavy rains which flooded the right of way to a depth of about 15 inches near Seventeenth and Commerce streets, Wellsville.

The first break occurred at 8 o'clock this morning. Another tie-up of nearly an hour resulted at 12:30 o'clock, this afternoon.

Washouts in the hillside sections were also reported as a result of the noon rain but damage was slight. There was but one interruption in electric light service.

No damage by the rain was reported by the telephone company.

Marquis of Lansdowne Dies.

LONDON, June 4.—The Marquis of Lansdowne, former secretary of war and at various times governor general of India and of Canada, died suddenly today.

Mrs. Irene Morron, 70, Lisbon, Dies; Funeral on Monday

Mrs. Irene Morron, 70, wife of W. C. Morron, died today in her home, East Lincoln way, Lisbon, after four weeks' illness of complication of diseases.

Mrs. Morron, who was a daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. Edward Greenamyer, of Columbiana, is survived by her husband, and one daughter, Mrs. Pauline Heilbroner, of Lisbon.

Private funeral services will be held in the home Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, in charge of Rev. R. J. Bennett, pastor of the Lisbon Christian church. Burial will be made in the Lisbon cemetery.

BELLANCA PLANE AND DARING PILOT

The Bellanca plane "Columbia," with Clarence D. Chamberlain, pilot, who was accompanied by Charles A. Levine, millionaire head of the Columbia Aircraft corporation, hopped off today for Europe. Presumably the Bellanca plane will attempt to reach Berlin. Inset shows Lloyd W. Bertaud, who resigned as navigator of the craft.

JOHN CHECKLER SUFFOCATED IN SUB-BASEMENT

Samuel Vendzin, 34, Badly Gassed, Rescued.

STILL IS FOUND

Tragedy Occurs in Third Street Building, Wellsville.

John Checkler, 45, known as "Big John," is dead, while Samuel Vendzin, 34, is in a serious condition in the City hospital, as a result of being overcome by gas fumes in a sub-cellar under Checkler's grocery store and home in Third street, Wellsville, at 11:30 o'clock this morning.

Police, who seized a 30-gallon still, one 10-gallon keg of liquor, four barrels of mash and two empty kegs, and also found a gas burner in the basement, expressed the opinion that the tragedy occurred while the two men were attempting to operate the equipment.

Checkler died a few minutes after his son, James, who had tied a rope around the 250-pound form of his father, and others had pulled the man through the 19-inch trap door over the sub-cellar from which deadly fumes were pouring forth.

Previously, Vendzin had been taken from the death hole by the Checkler youth, but the son was unable to rescue his father because of the latter's weight.

Screams of relatives of Checkler, who were alarmed by the discovery made by the son, prompted neighbors to call police and firemen, and later a pulmotor was rushed from the East Liverpool fire department. Efforts of physicians and use of the pulmotor failed to resuscitate the elder Checkler who was gasping as he was taken from the sub-cellar.

Vendzin was taken to the East Liverpool hospital, where his condition was reported grave at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Checkler leaves a widow and eight children.

MAYOR CALLS FOR ANOTHER PAY ORDINANCE

Urges $1,800 as he Permits Slash to Become Law.

HITS ARGUMENTS

Cites Other Cities' Action and Condemns "False Economy."

Branding the $1,200 pay ordinance which he permitted to become a law without his signature last night, "false economy," Mayor Ralph C. Benedum today called upon council to enact "legislation restoring the salary to its former figure." The present compensation, which will be cut on January 1, 1928, is $1,800 a year.

The mayor cities the salaries paid mayors in other Ohio cities, some of which have municipal courts, which, it is claimed, relieves the mayor of much work. He also points to his 1926 record of license collection and enforcement of the building permit ordinance, which, he declared, added more than half a million dollars to the city's tax duplicate.

Message To Council.

His message to council reads, in part, as follows:

"It is my personal opinion that this ordinance is wrong and it is a false economy. However, in view of the fact that I am the present mayor and

YANKEE PILOT OF BELLANCA PLANE BEGINS OCEAN FLIGHT

Charles Levine, Millionaire Builder of Columbia Aboard.

FLIER CHEERED

Starts From Runway That Lindbergh Left Fortnight Ago.

HALIFAX, N. S., June 4.—A monoplane, believed to be the Bellanca flown by Clarence Chamberlin, was reported as being sighted over the Bay of Fundy off Yarmouth, N. S., at noon, standard time, today.

500 Miles From New York.

The reports received here did not state definitely the position of the mon plane, but it is believed it was opposite Yarmouth about 500 miles by direct airline from New York. Taking into account the time difference at Halifax it is estimated that Chamberlin had been in the air something over five hours when the monoplane was sighted.

The flight from Yarmouth to the open sea is still some 700 miles by direct airline and it is probable that Chamberlin will not head out over the ocean until around 7:30 o'clock tonight.

Y., June 4.—Another non-stop trans-Atlantic airplane flight got under way today when Clarence D .Chamberlin, piloting the great Bellanca monoplane, Columbia, hopped off for Europe shortly after 6 o'clock (Eastern daylight time) from the same runway that Charles A. Lindbergh left on his historic flight a fortnight ago.

TRANS-ATLANTIC NON-STOP FLIERS SWING OUT TO SEA OFF CAPE COD TWO HOURS AFTER THEIR NEW YORK JUMP-OFF

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., June 4.—The Bellanca Monoplane Columbia, carrying Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine on a trans-Atlantic non-stop flight swung out to sea off the tip of the long arm of Cape Cod at 8:45 a. m. today (Eastern daylight time).

The plane, which had been previously reported at Dartmouth and New Bedford, on the mainland, was identified by coast guardsmen of the Wood End station, near here. The Coast Guardsmen stated they observed the numerals "140" distinctly on the side of the big plane as it passed out to sea flying high in the sunlight.

Apparently Chamberlin and Levine on their flight were following virtually the same course as that taken by Charles Lindbergh on his memorable New York to Paris hop. The Columbia, however, unlike the "Spirit of St. Louis" with Lindbergh, was favored with perfect weather. When Lindbergh swept up the New England coastline for his turn at Newfoundland, he passed through great banks of fog. Today the sun was shining, visibility was many miles, and flying conditions generally were ideal.

Ships Asked To Aid.

NEW YORK, June 4.—"Altogether favorable" weather conditions face Clarence D. Chamberlin for at least the first half of his non-stop trans-Atlantic flight, the weather bureau announced today.

ST. JOHNS, Newfoundland, June 4.—Weather conditions were perfect today along the north Atlantic coast for Clarence Chamberlin's non-stop attempt from New York to Europe. A smart breeze was blowing out of the northwest, ready to aid the Bellanca monoplane on its eastward hop from here to Ireland, and a brilliant sun was shining. The weather was far different from the foggy atmosphere through which Charles Lindbergh was forced to fly.

WASHINGTON, June 4. — A wireless message to all shipping in the Atlantic was broadcast by the bureau of naval operations this morning, apprising mariners of the Chamberlin-Levine flight to Europe and asking aid and co-operation for the fliers.

The shipping board today sent radio message to all its ships in the north Atlantic to watch for Chamberlin and report by wireless any pertinent information regarding the flight.

Bad Weather Forecast.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Clarence Chamberlin may buck into bad weather tonight on his trans-Atlantic flight, the weather bureau said today.

During the day he will have favorable southeast winds but tonight the winds become strong and shift to the south, with the weather overcast. Rain was predicted for tonight and Sunda... fog off the coast tonight.

The coast guard cutter Tampa is on ice patrol 400 miles east of Cape Race, and Billiard radioed the ship to keep a close lookout for the Bellanca.

Weather conditions off Newfoundland are good, according to advices to the coast guard, but there are indications of today and stormy weather farther on.

TRANS-ATLANTIC NON-STOP FLIERS SWING OUT TO SEA OFF CAPE COD TWO HOURS AFTER THEIR NEW YORK JUMP-OFF

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., June 4.—The Bellanca Monoplane Columbia, carrying Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine on a trans-Atlantic non-stop flight swung out to sea off the tip of the long arm of Cape Cod at 8:45 a. m. today (Eastern daylight time).

The plane, which had been previously reported at Dartmouth and New Bedford, on the mainland, was identified by coast guardsmen of the Wood End station, near here. The Coast Guardsmen stated they observed the numerals "140" distinctly on the side of the big plane as it passed out to sea flying high in the sunlight.

Apparently Chamberlin and Levine on their flight were following virtually the same course as that taken by Charles Lindbergh on his memorable New York to Paris hop. The Columbia, however, unlike the "Spirit of St. Louis" with Lindbergh, was favored with perfect weather. When Lindbergh swept up the New England coastline for his turn at Newfoundland, he passed through great banks of fog. Today the sun was shining, visibility was many miles, and flying conditions generally were ideal.

Ships Asked To Aid.

NEW YORK, June 4.—"Altogether favorable" weather conditions face Clarence D. Chamberlin for at least the first half of his non-stop trans-Atlantic flight, the weather bureau announced today.

ST. JOHNS, Newfoundland, June 4.—Weather conditions were perfect today along the north Atlantic coast for Clarence Chamberlin's non-stop attempt from New York to Europe. A smart breeze was blowing out of the northwest, ready to aid the Bellanca monoplane on its eastward hop from here to Ireland, and a brilliant sun was shining. The weather was far different from the foggy atmosphere through which Charles Lindbergh was forced to fly.

WASHINGTON, June 4. — A wireless message to all shipping in the Atlantic was broadcast by the bureau of naval operations this morning, apprising mariners of the Chamberlin-Levine flight to Europe and asking aid and co-operation for the fliers.

The shipping board today sent radio message to all its ships in the north Atlantic to watch for Chamberlin and report by wireless any pertinent information regarding the flight.

Bad Weather Forecast.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Clarence Chamberlin may buck into bad weather tonight on his trans-Atlantic flight, the weather bureau said today.

During the day he will have favorable southeast winds but tonight the winds become strong and shift to the south, with the weather overcast. Rain was predicted for tonight and Sunda... "o ... fog off the coast tonight.

The coast guard cutter Tampa is on ice patrol 400 miles east of Cape Race, and Billiard radioed the ship to keep a close lookout for the Bellanca.

Weather conditions off Newfoundland are good, according to advices to the coast guard, but there are indications of today and stormy weather farther on.

ALLISON DEMANDS "BUSINESS" MEET OF ASSEMBLY

DELEGATE HITS TAX SYSTEM IN WEST VIRGINIA

Chester Man Goes to Charleston for Monday Session.

GOVERNOR CALLS

Hancock County Member Condemns "Politics" in Legislature.

Before leaving for Charleston today to attend the extraordinary session of the state legislature, which convenes on Monday, Delegate O. O. Allison, of Chester, in an interview, declared West Virginia needs a "business" assembly, not a "political" one, and assailed the state's tax system.

"The question, said Allison, now is: Who are the people?

Back at home the people hear or know little about the uses and abuses of temporary power. The people of our state elect 30 senators and 94 members of the house of delegates, or a total of 124 representatives, to manage the affairs of more than a million six hundred thousand of people. In other words, every 12,903 persons in the state have one representative making history, formulating policies, doing what the people want done. But, that percentage is cut down to where 48 votes in the house or 16 in the senate can say "stop." Therefore, in the house there is one voice for every 33,334 people, while in the senate every 100,000 people have one representative at the "stop" crossing.

"At the time we recessed at Charleston, those who controlled the senate were not doing team work with our chief executive. I shall not at this time undertake to fix fault. The governor has called us in extraordinary session, and in an energetic message has put up certain questions to the two bodies for action. It is my sincere hope that each member will lay aside all personal grievances, politics and selfish motives, keeping in mind only the welfare of all the people of our state.

"What West Virginia needs is a "business" legislature, instead of a "political" legislature, which truly means the science of government, for the protection and advancment of the people. But West Virginia will never come into her own so long as the present, miserable tax system prevails."

(Lindbergh's mother told Miss Bonita Witt, the writer, that her son did not want to worry her by letting her know of his thrills at aviation school. Miss Witt, therefore, went to a class-mate of "the Swede" to learn first-hand of those thrills.)

BY BONITA WITT.

(Staff writer for Central Press and The Review-Tribune.)

Copyright, 1927, by Central Press Co.

VIII.

Call it luck, fate or what you will, the same guiding spirit that watched over Charles A. Lindbergh as he winged his way across the solitary expanse of the Atlantic on his non-stop flight from New York to Paris, smiled on the flying cadets with which he was graduated from Brooks-Kelly government aviation school, San Antonio, Tex., in 1925. His was the first class to be graduated from that institution without losing one of its members by death. Several of the boys crashed and were slightly injured but no one was killed.

Of the 18 graduates, 17 are living today. Lieut. Maurice Gathercoal was drowned in the summer of 1925 while flying across Lake Michigan.

Five of the men are commissioned army aviators in the Philippines, one is a captain in the Peruvian army, another is in the Department of Agriculture service at Tallulah, La.

All of them have been successful in their respective fields of flying and they're waiting for their old-time classmate, "the big Swede," to return to the United States to "throw a party" for him that they believe will give him a much bigger "kick" than any feting by the crowned heads of Europe.

What Classmates Say.

"This popularity and attention won't spoil 'Swede,'" they say. "He'll be just the same unspoiled kid when he returns."

Lindbergh had one crash just before his graduation, that almost proved fatal.

Capt. Eugene Stevens, one of the four students assigned to advanced pursuit flying in Lindbergh's class at Brooks-Kelly, tells of "Slim's" narrowest escape from death.

"Twelve planes were in the air," he recalls, "flying in three-ship formation, all of us chasing Lieut. Russell Maugham, who later became famous as the original 'dawn to-dusk' flyer across the continent. As the enemy, he was supposed to fly below us. When the leader of the pursuit squadron gave the signal we would tear down toward him, motors racing, at a terrific speed. Then, just before we reached him, we'd 'zoom' or start a sharp climb to avoid hitting his plane. Since we were going at such a terrific pace we'd climb with considerable swiftness.

Then—Disaster!

"At an elevation of 4,000 feet Lindburgh and Lieut. C. D. MacCallister crashed into each other as they dived for Maughham's plane. They crashed with such force that they locked and climbed for several hundred feet before they fell. Bits of fusillage, struts and canvass floated slowly to the ground, then the planes crashed earthward. The first I knew of the accident was when I saw the planes dash to the ground and burst into flames. That's when an aviator gets scared—when he believes one of his friends is dying on a flaming plane.

"Maybe I didn't feel happy when I saw Lindbergh and MacAllister appear out of a cloud with their para chutes.

"While the two pilots picked themselves up from a ploughed field the other cadets in their planes played about the bonfire.

"Death didn't interest us much. Of course none of us wanted to die, but we didn't sit down and worry about crashing. When we learned the two men were safe, we forgot that Death had been hovering over the squadron a few minutes before."

Perhaps this glimpse of the philosophy of a flying cadet explains Lindbergh's apparent indifference to death or danger when he was waiting for favorable weather conditions for his Paris flight. The tragic fate of Nungessor and Coli did not appear to disturb him—he deeply regretted their loss, but the thought never occurred to him that the same fate might overtake him. He had made up his mind to fly to Paris and all else was subservient to that one alluring goal.

ARMY AND NAVY PLANES WILL GREET FLIER

Washington Prepares For Brilliant Escort for Lindbergh.

DIRIGIBLE ON JOB

Penn Avenue Will be Decorated as on Inaugural Day.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Capt. Charles Lindbergh will steam up the historic Potomac river with one of the most brilliant escorts ever furnished an American, to receive probably the most imposing reception ever accorded a private citizen in Washington.

The giant dirigible Los Angeles, scores of army and navy airplanes and hundreds of river craft will travel in the wake of the cruiser Memphis, it was indicated today.

The tortuous river route will carry him from the scene of many famous fleet reviews off the Virginia capes through the favorite cruising ground of presidents and past beautiful Mount Vernon, the ancestral seat of George Washington.

Will Occupy Admiral's Suite.

During the long voyage across the Atlantic Capt. Lindbergh probably will occupy an admiral's suite, it was said by navy officials. The cruiser Memphis, because it is the flagship of the European squadron, has specially fitted quarters for Admiral Burrage, who will not make the trip.

A fast trip but no guarantee against sea sickness was promised by naval officials. The Memphis, one of the navy's most modern 7,500-ton cruisers, can speed across the Atlantic at 33 knots an hour in comparative comfort for a hardened ocean voyager but with some danger of initial sickness for non-sailors.

Mother to be Invited.

Commissioners of the district, collaborating with four members of the cabinet, were busy today under the chairmanship of John Hays Hammond, noted engineer and philanthropist, in arranging the details of Lindbergh's welcome.

Historic Pennsylvania avenue will be decorated as on inaugural day, and lined with troops.

An invitation was to go forward today to Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh to come to Washington as a guest of Mrs. Coolidge at the temporary White House.

Brides Demand Battle Rite.

Brides of Abchasia, a district of the Caucauses, demand that the ancient custom of the bridegroom's battle for his fair one be continued. Few will accept a suitor who does not intend to carry them off by force. The custom is that on the wedding day the bride withdraws to the darkest room in her home. At dusk the bridegroom, supported by a bodyguard of friends, all armed to the teeth, rides to the house and engages in a mock dagger battle with the bride's relatives. Victorious he finds the bride and carries her away on his horse. Her relatives give chase, and when the bridegroom's house is reached, all join in a contest to see who can drink the most wine.

Sleeping accommodations are open to only first-class passengers in Europe.

The cost of living is falling in England.

Strange Beast Terrorizes.

A mysterious beast that walks on its hind legs is terrorizing natives in the Kenya Colony of India. It has killed a number of blacks, and the "Nandi bear," as they call it, is inspiring more fear than a lion. No white hunter has seen it, but Kanya's acting game warden, who examined the tracks, agrees that it walks on its hind legs. It has been described as being a strange species of lion, or even gorilla, but natives believe it is a hitherto unknown member of the hyena family that climbs trees. One report is that it has cream-colored hair, long tapering feet, with huge claws, and long nose covered with hair to the tip. It is said to roam only at night.

Long-distance telephone lines are just being developed in Belgium.

Ian Keith Plays Lead in "What Eevery Girl Should Know."

"What Every Girl Should Know," the Warner Bros. production at the Strand theatre, Monday and Tuesday, is an original screen play directed by Charles F. Reisner. This is the same Reisner who directed Syd Chaplin in "The Better 'Ole," and who shared the honors of authorship with Bruce Bairnsfather. For years before this success, Mr. Reisner had been famous inside of the picture industry as the man responsible for the funny gags in the Charles Chaplin comedies.

"What Every Girl Should Know" has proved to be a Reisner triumph everywhere it has been shown. It promises thrills, heart-throbs, fun and tenderness.

The story deals with Mamie Sullivan, the little mother of two orphaned brothers. The big brother, Dave, driving a truck, accidentally runs down and kills a woman. Through circumstantial evidence, he is convicted of manslaughter and sent to jail. Mamie and her kid brother are sent to an orphans' home. They escape and devote themselves to Dave's vindication.

Mamie is played by Patsy Ruth Miller, and Mickey McBan and Carrol Nye appear as her brothers. Mickey is the remarkable youngster who played the little boy in "Beau Geste," who got a bullet in his leg, and, in "The Return of Peter Grimm," the boy who gets into communication with old Peter.

The leading man is Ian Keith, whose work in "The Prince of Tempters" signalled him out for praise in lists devoted to the outstanding performances of the screen year.

Carmelita Geraghty, who, besides being a screen actress, is a well known amateur tennis player on the Pacific Coast, appears as a girl tennis champion, who meets her match in Mamie Sullivan, the kid from the playgrounds. Others in the cast are Lillian Langdon and Hazel Howell.

In a recent horse race suit in Epsom, England, one witness' name was Easedown.

Ballymena, Ireland, is to build 193 double houses for farm workers.

(Lindbergh's mother told Miss Bonita Witt, the writer, that her son did not want to worry her by letting her know of his thrills at aviation school. Miss Witt, therefore, went to a class-mate of "the Swede" to learn first-hand of those thrills.)

BY BONITA WITT.

VIII.

Call it luck, fate or what you will, the same guiding spirit that watched over Charles A. Lindbergh as he winged his way across the solitary expanse of the Atlantic on his non-stop flight from New York to Paris, smiled on the flying cadets with which he was graduated from Brooks-Kelly government aviation school, San Antonio, Tex., in 1925. His was the first class to be graduated from that institution without losing one of its members by death. Several of the boys crashed and were slightly injured but no one was killed.

Of the 18 graduates, 17 are living today. Lieut. Maurice Gathercoal was drowned in the summer of 1925 while flying across Lake Michigan.

Five of the men are commissioned army aviators in the Philippines, one is a captain in the Peruvian army, another is in the Department of Agriculture service at Tallulah, La.

All of them have been successful in their respective fields of flying and they're waiting for their old-time classmate, "the big Swede," to return to the United States to "throw a party" for him that they believe will give him a much bigger "kick" than any feting by the crowned heads of Europe.

What Classmates Say.

"This popularity and attention won't spoil 'Swede,'" they say. "He'll be just the same unspoiled kid when he returns."

Lindbergh had one crash just before his graduation, that almost proved fatal.

Capt. Eugene Stevens, one of the four students assigned to advanced pursuit flying in Lindbergh's class at Brooks-Kelly, tells of "Slim's" narrowest escape from death.

"Twelve planes were in the air," he recalls, "flying in three-ship formation, all of us chasing Lieut. Russell Maugham, who later became famous as the original 'dawn to dusk' flyer across the continent. As the enemy, he was supposed to fly below us. When the leader of the pursuit squadron gave the signal we would tear down toward him, motors racing, at a terrific speed. Then, just before we reached him, we'd 'zoom' or start a sharp climb to avoid hitting his plane. Since we were going at such a terrific pace we'd climb with considerable swiftness.

Then—Disaster!

"At an elevation of 4,000 feet Lindburgh and Lieut. C. D. MacCallister crashed into each other as they dived for Maughham's plane. They crashed with such force that they locked and climbed for several hundred feet before they fell. Bits of fusillage, struts and canvass floated slowly to the ground, then the planes crashed earhward. The first I knew of the accident was when I saw the planes dash to the ground and burst into flames. That's when an aviator gets scared—when he believes one of his friends is dying on a flaming plane.

"Maybe I didn't feel happy when I saw Lindbergh and MacAllister appear out of a cloud with their parachutes.

"While the two pilots picked themselves up from a ploughed field the other cadets in their planes played about the bonfire.

"Death didn't interest us much. Of course none of us wanted to die, but we didn't sit down and worry about crashing. When we learned the two men were safe, we forgot that Death had been hovering over the squadron a few minutes before."

Perhaps this glimpse of the philosophy of a flying cadet explains Lindbergh's apparent indifference to death or danger when he was waiting for favorable weather conditions for his Paris flight. The tragic fate of Nungessor and Coli did not appear to disturb him—he deeply regretted their loss, but the thought never occurred to him that the same fate might overtake him. Miss Updegraff's Retirement

Announcement of the board of education yesterday of the retirement of Miss Florence Updegraff from the principalship and teaching staff of the East Liverpool high school, in the success of which she played an important part during her many years of splendid service, was received with regret on the part of the people of the community, for she had earned the love and respect of hundreds, yes thousands, of alumni as well as their parents and grand parents.

For nearly a half century, Miss Flo, as the head of the high school faculty was popularly known to the many students who have marveled at her vast store of knowledge as well as her efficiency, has directed an educational institution that ranks high in the state of Ohio.

Few educators, if any, can point to a record so brilliantly imprinted in the annals of time as Miss Updegraff's. She was equipped mentally for the all-important tasks that fell to her lot during 48 years of teaching. Endowed with a keen intellect, possessed of a rare personality combined with the tact of a diplomat, she served with distinction to herself and credit to the schools.

And, too, Miss Flo has molded the characters and shaped the careers of scores of East Liverpool sons and daughters who have chosen places in the business and professional world. And they owe no small part of their success to her counsel.

The retirement of Miss Updegraff is a great loss to the East Liverpool schools, and the board of education will search long and far before finding a man or woman who can capably and efficiently fill her place.

An Italian Kaiser

Mussolini at last has shown his hand. In a recent speech to the Italian Parliament, he revealed his plans for Italy. They are plans that the world should know—especially as his hearers applauded them with vast enthusiasm.

He proposes to "continue the task of governing the Italian people" for 10 or 15 years more, because it is his "precise duty." His task, as he sees it, is not only to build up Italian industry, in which he has made considerable progress, but to build up Italian population and to build a great, effective army.

He tells Italy, which now has about 42,000,000 people, that by 1950 it must have 60,000,000. What for? Cannon fodder, apparently, more than anything else.

"It is a fundamental duty to perfect our armed forces. We must be able at a certain time to mobilize 5,000,000 men." The moment Italy can do that, "we can make ourselves heard." There must also be a strong navy and a strong air force.

What can that mean but military conquest?

Mussolini, then, is dreaming the German Kaiser's dream. Italy, too, looks forward to her "Tag." And in the preparation for conquest, says the dictator, "we bury solemnly all the lies of universal democratic suffrage." For God and Kaiser there is the dream of a new Roman Empire, with the Duce as emperor.

Almost the identical dream that Wilhelm and his people dreamed. Have Mussolini and his charmed Italians learned nothing from the history of the last 13 years?

Eye Test For Children

Sone one has worked out a vision test system for young children, in which funny little animals take the place of letters of the alphabet. The system is being demonstrated at public health centers and schools. If it proves satisfactory, this Noah's Ark eye test undoubtedly will be widely used in examining the eyes of little children.

Saving human eyesight is an important field of health activity. Many youngsters are retarded in their mental and physical development because of vision defects which might be cured or corrected if discovered and taken care of promptly.

A great deal is being done in improving artificial lighting methods to safeguard vision in homes, schools, factories and offices. All that is of great importance, but is only part of the work to be done in protecting and strengthening human eyes. Along with it, testing the eyes themselves is necessary, and probably the best time is before the children start to school.

Roofed With Honey

In Gomshall, Eng., we are told, stands a farmhouse built in the 15th century. There is danger of its roof caving in, but not because of age. The roof is so full of honey that it has become too heavy for the supporting beams. That roof has been a gigantic beehive for 100 years. According to the present owner of the house, no one in all that time has tried to take out any of the honey because that would have required removing the roof.

Now roof or family must go. There is real danger in further delay. Moving out looks like the fairest proposition, because those bees really have more property in that house than the humans have. If the people left, perhaps the bees would put honey in the downstairs rooms, too.

Byron, or someone or other, woke up one morning to find himself famous. Capt. Lindbergh found himself famous because he didn't go to sleep.

If Lindbergh eats and drinks as little in Europe as he did on the way over, he'll survive the ordeal.

Mild Excitement When Father Got Home— By Fontaine Fox

THE EVILS OF INTEMPERANCE

A certain newspaper proprietor in New York who always was—and still is, even in these prohibition days, a total abstainer—dropped into the office just before press time, and found the assistant managing editor in charge.

"Where's Blank?" he asked, naming the managing editor.

"Off on one of these periodical tears of his," answered the assistant

"Where's the city editor?"

"Pied—down in Andy Horn's."

"I didn't see the make-up editor as I came through the composing room. What's become of him?"

"He's in a Turkish bath over in Brooklyn getting a bun boiled out of him."

The proprietor dropped into a chair, shaking his head sadly.

"Well," he said, "for a person who never touches a drop I seem to suffer more from the effects of drunkenness than any other man in this town."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY
By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, June 4.—No professional calling is so provocative of sneers as that of the female impersonator. With exception of Julian Eltinge who is rich and has a Rialto theatre named for him, few have attained theatrical heights.

Yet the female impersonator is invariably a drawing card. Bert Savoy with his jovial hard boiled commonness packed theatres from coast to coast. He spawned slang that went around the world. One of the first female impersonators was Bill Artz, who now runs a dog shop on Sixth avenue.

The modern crop of female impersonators are college men who found their metier at college theatricals. They launched careers in what they considered at the time mere clowning. Many fathers who expected sons to sit at important desks lived to see them traipsing around in women's clothes.

As a rule the female impersonator is a pronounced masculine type. One peculiarly enough graduated to his calling from the driver's seat of a truck. Most of them are married, but they live pretty much alone. They are conscious of a certain stigma.

In his early days Julian Eltinge had to prove his masculinity by mighty wallops. He frequently waded through a semi-circle of jeers at back stage doors leaving several with moused eyes and dangling teeth. He was handy with his mitts.

A press agent devised a rousing publicity stunt for one impersonator. It was during the days of Jack Johnson's championship. The scheme was for the actor to go to the resort in Chicago over which Johnson presided and start a row.

The impersonator was to hit Johnson and depend on the burly escorts accompanying him for protection from serious damage. It was well staged and would have doubtless won first page prominence all over the land. But at the opportune moment the impersonator paled and slumped into a dead faint. It was Johnson who considerably revived him with a dash of cold water.

A film impresario recently sounded me as to the possibility of titling one of his products. I replied I didn't feel I possessed the necessary qualifications. He misunderstood my evasion and inquired: "How much intelligence do you assume it requires to title films?" I'd hate to tell him being the polite boy I am.

Not since "Diamond Jim" Brady was the porcine playboy of Broadway has there been a conspicuous "first nighter." Several have tried it—among them a tire salesman, a cafe keeper, a well known theatrical angel—but they simply couldn't make the grade. When Brady went down the aisle with perhaps a Dolly sister on each arm it was the event that caused a craning of necks. His imitators do not even receive a side glance.

Broadway fame requires consistent effort. Once in awhile some figure squirms up from the maggotry of sensational tabloidism to be a nine day wonder but usually they must do the same thing year in and year out to keep the focus. STATE AND LOCAL TAXES.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 4. — Business men and others who believe that state and local taxes are too high should not be content merely to talk and complain about it as they talk and coplain about the weather. They should get busy and do something about it. They should initiate a movement to simplify, coordinate, standardize, and synchronize the tax systems of the various states. Through some organization they should undertake to formulate a suitable state and local tax plan, and then by means of an educational campaign endeaver to encourage and persuade its general adoption.

Such is the opinion of Mark Graves, who, as a member of the New York tax commission, can qualify as an expert on the subject and was asked to discuss it before the United States Chamber of Commerce. But while he concedes that reforms are needed, Mr. Graves does inot subscribe to the widely disseminated idea that the government tax bill of the country is unduly high and that waste and extravagance characterize the expenditure of state and local funds while the Federal government is conserving the people's resources.

We are told, he says, that the expenditures for all governmental purposes in the country are now around ten or eleven billion dollars yearly. This is the subject of much comment. Some believe that the vast expenditures are unwarranted, that they are due to waste and extravagance on the part of public officials, and that the burden of taxation is almost if not quite unbearable.

Mr. Graves' answer to this is somewhat akin to the famous retort of the late Joseph G. Cannon to the member of congress who was complaining about the constant increase in government appropriations and finally thew up his hands and wailed, "Why, at the rate we're going we'll soon be spending a billion dollar a year!"

"Hell, this is a billion-dollar country," answered Uncle Joe.

We Can Afford All It Costs.

"I doubt if things are as bad as they are represented," says Mr. Graves. 'We spend upwards of fourteen billion dollars annually in purchasing, maintaining and operating automobiles; two billions for cigars, cigarettes, and other tobacco products; one billion for beverages, exclusive of amounts paid bootleggers; one billion for entertainment; and then after paying taxes we find the wealth of the nation is increasing at the rate of twenty-five billion annually.

"I maintain that a people who can spend the amounts enumerated for the purposes named and still add to their combined wealth twenty-five billion dollars yearly can afford, without undue hardship, to pay ten billion—a little more or a little less—for all the benefits, advantages, and blessings of government."

Constant repetition of the statement that the gederal government is constantly increasing theirs, he continues, causes many to believe that state and local officials are spendthrifts while federal officials have the characteristics usually attributed to Scotchmen. A fair, impartial study of the facts does not warrant this assumption. Such comparisons are made by selecting the peak of war taxes as the basis with which to compare taxes of the present, and Mr. Graves holds any such comparsion to be unfair.

If comparisons are to be made he maintains that a cycle from pre-war normal conditions to postwar normal conditions should be selected. The federal expenditures inculded debt serpenses chargeable against ordinary receipts in 1925 were 364 per cent higher than in 1915, while during the same period the expenditures of the states increased 173 per cent and those of cities having a population of 30,000 or more, 84 per cent. Of course the federal expenditures included debt service payments and others directly due to the war, but an analysis shows that the payments for the usual expenses of the federal government common to every year's business are climbing, not becoming.

This expert cites the reasons why the costs of government have increased so noticeably in the past decade, the first being that the dollar does not purchase as much as it did in pre-war times. That alone accounts for 50 per cent of the increase.

Education and Automobiles.

Education and automobiles, he finds, are responsible for a large part of the increase in governmental expenditures.

"In 1915," he says, 'the states and their municipal subdivisions expended for public education, in round figures, $330,000,000. In 1925, similar expenditures exceeded $950,000,000, an increase of nearly 200 per cent. If spending less means less education, few would favor reducing taxes by curtailing this item.

'The third principal cause for increase in state and local expenditures is the motor vehicle. That modern invention has necessitated more and better highways. Enormous sums are being spent annually by the states and their localities in constructing and maintaining improved roads. Moreover, the automobile has made it possible to extend and develop the suburbs of cities and that has required more streets, more street lighting, and, finally, the cities have been forced greatly to enlarge their appropriations for traffic control, including both traffic signal systems and traffic officers."

The fourth specific cause for the growing cost of government is that the population is increasing, and in addition the people are demanding more and better governmental service as the nation grows in wealth.

In the matter of tax reform, Mr. Graves does not suggest that each

Miss Updegraff's Retirement

Announcement of the board of education yesterday of the retirement of Miss Florence Updegraff from the principalship and teaching staff of the East Liverpool high school, in the success of which she played an important part during her many years of splendid service, was received with regret on the part of the people of the community, for she had earned the love and respect of hundreds, yes thousands, of alumni as well as their parents and grand parents.

For nearly a half century, Miss Flo, as the head of the high school faculty was popularly known to the many students who have marveled at her vast store of knowledge as well as her efficiency, has directed an educational institution that ranks high in the state of Ohio.

Few educators, if any, can point to a record so brilliantly imprinted in the annals of time as Miss Updegraff's. She was equipped mentally for the all-important tasks that fell to her lot during 48 years of teaching. Endowed with a keen intellect, possessed of a rare personality combined with the tact of a diplomat, she served with distinction to herself and credit to the schools.

And, too, Miss Flo has molded the characters and shaped the careers of scores of East Liverpool sons and daughters who have chosen places in the business and professional world. And they owe no small part of their success to her counsel.

The retirement of Miss Updegraff is a great loss to the East Liverpool schools, and the board of education will search long and far before finding a man or woman who can capably and efficiently fill her place.

An Italian Kaiser

Mussolini at last has shown his hand. In a recent speech to the Italian Parliament, he revealed his plans for Italy. They are plans that the world should know—especially as his hearers applauded them with vast enthusiasm.

He proposes to "continue the task of governing the Italian people" for 10 or 15 years more, because it is his "precise duty." His task, as he sees it, is not only to build up Italian industry, in which he has made considerable progress, but to build up Italian population and to build a great, effective army.

He tells Italy, which now has about 42,000,000 people, that by 1950 it must have 60,000,000. What for? Cannon fodder, apparently, more than anything else.

"It is a fundamental duty to perfect our armed forces. We must be able at a certain time to mobilize 5,000,000 men." The moment Italy can do that, "we can make ourselves heard." There must also be a strong navy and a strong air force.

What can that mean but military conquest?

Mussolini, then, is dreaming the German Kaiser's dream. Italy, too, looks forward to her "Tag." And in the preparation for conquest, says the dictator, "we bury solemnly all the lies of universal democratic suffrage." For God and Kaiser there is the dream of a new Roman Empire, with the Duce as emperor.

Almost the identical dream that Wilhelm and his people dreamed. Have Mussolini and his charmed Italians learned nothing from the history of the last 13 years?

Eye Test For Children

Sone one has worked out a vision test system for young children, in which funny little animals take the place of letters of the alphabet. The system is being demonstrated at public health centers and schools. If it proves satisfactory, this Noah's Ark eye test undoubtedly will be widely used in examining the eyes of little children.

Saving human eyesight is an important field of health activity. Many youngsters are retarded in their mental and physical development because of vision defects which might be cured or corrected if discovered and taken care of promptly.

A great deal is being done in improving artificial lighting methods to safeguard vision in homes, schools, factories and offices. All that is of great importance, but is only part of the work to be done in protecting and strengthening human eyes. Along with it, testing the eyes themselves is necessary, and probably the best time is before the children start to school.

Roofed With Honey

In Gomshall, Eng., we are told, stands a farmhouse built in the 15th century. There is danger of its roof caving in, but not because of age. The roof is so full of honey that it has become too heavy for the supporting beams. That roof has been a gigantic beehive for 100 years. According to the present owner of the house, no one in all that time has tried to take out any of the honey because that would have required removing the roof.

Now roof or family must go. There is real danger in further delay. Moving out looks like the fairest proposition, because those bees really have more property in that house than the humans have. If the people left, perhaps the bees would put honey in the downstairs rooms, too.

Byron, or someone or other, woke up one morning to find himself famous. Capt. Lindbergh found himself famous because he didn't go to sleep.

If Lindbergh eats and drinks as little in Europe as he did on the way over, he'll survive the ordeal.

THE EVILS OF INTEMPERANCE

A certain newspaper proprietor in New York who always was—and still is, even in these prohibition days, a total abstainer—dropped into the office just before press time, and found the assistant managing editor in charge.

"Where's Blank?" he asked, naming the managing editor.

"Off on one of these periodical tears of his," answered the assistant

"Where's the city editor?"

"Pied—down in Andy Horn's."

"I didn't see the make-up editor as I came through the composing room. What's become of him?"

"He's in a Turkish bath over in Brooklyn getting a bun boiled out of him."

The proprietor dropped into a chair, shaking his head sadly.

"Well," he said, "for a person who never touches a drop I seem to suffer more from the effects of drunkenness than any other man in this town."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY
By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, June 4.—No professional calling is so provocative of sneers as that of the female impersonator. With exception of Julian Eltinge who is rich and has a Rialto theatre named for him, few have attained theatrical heights.

Yet the female impersonator is invariably a drawing card. Bert Savoy with his jovial hard boiled commonness packed theatres from coast to coast. He spawned slang that went around the world. One of the first female impersonators was Bill Artz, who now runs a dog shop on Sixth avenue.

The modern crop of female impersonators are college men who found their metier at college theatricals. They launched careers in what they considered at the time mere clowning. Many fathers who expected sons to sit at important desks lived to see them traipsing around in women's clothes.

As a rule the female impersonator is a pronounced masculine type. One peculiarly enough graduated to his calling from the driver's seat of a truck. Most of them are married, but they live pretty much alone. They are conscious of a certain stigma.

In his early days Julian Eltinge had to prove his masculinity by mighty wallops. He frequently waded through a semi-circle of jeers at back stage doors leaving several with moused eyes and dangling teeth. He was handy with his mitts.

A press agent devised a rousing publicity stunt for one impersonator. It was during the days of Jack Johnson's championship. The scheme was for the actor to go to the resort in Chicago over which Johnson presided and start a row.

The impersonator was to hit Johnson and depend on the burly escorts accompanying him for protection from serious damage. It was well staged and would have doubtless won first page prominence all over the land. But at the opportune moment the impersonator paled and slumped into a dead faint. It was Johnson who considerably revived him with a dash of cold water.

A film impresario recently sounded me as to the possibility of titling one of his products. I replied I didn't feel I possessed the necessary qualifications. He misunderstood my evasion and inquired: "How much intelligence do you assume it requires to title films?" I'd hate to tell him being the polite boy I am.

Not since "Diamond Jim" Brady was the porcine playboy of Broadway has there been a conspicuous "first nighter." Several have tried it—among them a tire salesman, a cafe keeper, a well known theatrical angel—but they simply couldn't make the grade. When Brady went down the aisle with perhaps a Dolly sister on each arm it was the event that caused a craning of necks. His imitators do not even receive a side glance.

Broadway fame requires consistent effort. Once in awhile some figure squirms up from the maggotry of sensational tabloidism to be a nine day wonder but usually they must do the same thing year in and year out to keep the focus. Fame must be worn like Oscar Hammerstein's silk hat or Brad's diamonds to hold the spot.

Automats have been troubled recently by coffee thieves. A patron draws his coffee from the spigot, puts it on a table and returns for some article of food. When he reaches his table again his coffee has been consumed.

WELLSVILLE MEN ARE ACQUITTED OF EMBEZZLEMENT

JURORS FREE THREE ACCUSED IN BRASS CASE

"Not Guilty" Verdict Returned in Lisbon Court.

NINE-DAY TRIAL

Two Tons of Scrap Used as Exhibits by Attorneys.

George and John Shultz, and Abraham Katz, all of Wellsville, indicted on charges of embezzlement and receiving and concealing stolen property of the Pennsylvania Railroad company, were acquitted last night by a jury in common pleas court, Lisbon.

The "not guilty" verdict was returned at midnight, the jury being given the case at 8:38 p. m.

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE.

Tenderly, as he finished attaching the last piece of tape, he lowered his head and touched his lips to the gleaming skin, near the wound, then dropped to meet the upsweep of her arms, to meet the hot, vivid contact of her soft, scarlet lips.

A noise in the passageway aroused them and he straightened swiftly, drawing back into place the protecting folds of the girl's burnouse, and shifting the cushions beneath her head that they might be more comfortable for her. Then, he turned to find Bou Hamara's eyes on him, but there was no suspicion in their depths; only solicitude.

"The wound," he said. "Is it better?"

"Healing nicely," Larry answered

"Tenderly, he lowered his head and touched the lips to the gleaming skin."

aware that the flood of crimson was ebbing from Benna's face, that her eyes were soft and star-like and dreamy. "The three days you have promised us will see Allal Abdi ready to travel again."

"It is well," said the other, and he placed the food. "As I told you, there is little enough time to spare. If you fulfill all that is expected of you, you will do well to be ready for the action that will come with the anniversary of the phophet's birth."

"Bou Hamara," said Larry calmly, dipping into his couscous, noting the Bena, too, eating hungrily, "if I knew where I am going and what I shall find there, aside from the Eye, I could hasten my actions."

"Who am I to tell you? Truly, Youssef el-Habbassi, you are a wizard and you should know more of the future than I who, at best, am a shop keeper or soldier, as occasion demands."

"You spoke of the people growing restless. Tell me, has Omar ben Medjad heard of this restlessness?"

"I think he has, for all Islam is rapidly becoming aware of it. Even the Spanish, in far off Ab Dukkar must, by now, have heard a breath of what it means."

"It is, then—?" breathed Larry, leaning forward and forgetting his meal.

"It is a plan conjured by the Marabout Group for the Seven Tribes of the Berbers and their allies to the south, east and west to unite in a concerted movement against the power of Spain in Morocco; a move for the tribes to sweep out of the hills like a blight and scatter the Spaniards and the Partisans and the Submissive Tribes and the nasrani to the four winds. If successful, it will be the greatest massacre Morrocco has ever known. The move is inspired, no doubt, by reason of the successful warfare of the Riff tribes against the Spaniards.

Stunned, Larry sat silent, visioning the terrible calamity this would be to humanity. He could see in his mind's eye the hill hordes coming out of their mountain strongholds, armed to the teeth, charging in overwheling numbers on the weakly-manned settlements; could see the tidal wave of blood which would follow in the wake of this sweep of the tribes. He shuddered, then bowed under the enormity of the task he could now see was resting on his own shoulders. After a time he looked up.

"Bou Hamara, I have suspected this for a long time, but only now have I heard said that which was in my thoughts. Tell me this: If I recover the Sacred Eye and place it in the hands of Omar ben Medjad, how will it stave off this terrible thing?"

Bou Hamara considered a moment, fingering his coffee cup and drawing deeply on his cigaret.

"I thought you realized, Youssef el-Habassi, that Omar ben Medjad is fighting as much for Spain as he is to set Allal Abdi in power. The Eye in his possession, it is in his mind to place the youth on the tribal throne and himself holding the Eye, guarded and secreted, give his own guarantee for the safety of Allal once the latter is sherif. With Allal ruling, friendship with Spain, and France, too, would be reaffirmed, conflict would cease and the mountain passes would no longer run red with the blood of brave men. An era of peace and good will would sweep the Berber country and the Marabout Group, of a necessity, would be dissolved and its members become what they used to be, wandering holy men, ministering religious wants of all the people."

Larry breathed deeply. He could see that it was necessary for the Eye to be recovered from the Marabout Group in order that the Group's diabolical schemings against the Spanish might be checkmated. But out of it all he visioned chiefly one fact that spurred him on in this momentous endeavor, this battling with wit and muscle against almost superhuman odds—and that was the restoration to rightful power of Benna Selham Allalabdi, the ruler of the Berbers.

"Having told me so much, Bou Hamara, tell me, too, where I shall find the Temple of Doom, and how I shall enter it after I have found it?" He looked at Bou Hamara expectantly, but the shop-keeper shook his head.

"Am I Allah, that I know all things?" he asked. "Would that I could answer you, but it is only in my mind that you must continue south, along the Forbidden Road; it is only in my mind that that which is past will prove to have been child's play compared with that which the future holds for you."

"You hold forth cheerful prospects, Bou Hamara. Tell me, do you know where Omar ben Medjad is now?"

The other drooped his head.

"No man may say. He is somewhere along the road, mayhap ahead of you, making ready the way as best he may for your coming wizard; but where he stops and with whom he speaks, Allah alone may tell."

"He left no word for me?"

"Word of a sort," answered the shop-keeper, fingering his dirty beard. "He said there would be one at the Gate of the Burning who would be watching for you, seeking to aid you. Too, he said that you would see the Eye, but were not to fear it; that if you heard the Voice, you were to use your wit, and that if called on to meet the Ordeal, you were to meet it as occasion told you was best. He said you probably would pass through the Gate of the Daggers and that you should pass through fearlessly. Now, I must leave you. If, at the end of three days, you have not seen me again, go quietly through a passageway I shall show you. It will bring you to the jungle beyond the edge of the karia, and from there you must push on, straight south. Take what food you may desire from the meager stores you will find there."

Youth of the Atlas

BY MARSHALL D. HALL
Author of The Valley of Strife and Riddle of the Rockies

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE.

Tenderly, as he finished attaching the last piece of tape, he lowered his head and touched his lips to the gleaming skin, near the wound, then dropped to meet the upsweep of her arms, to meet the hot, vivid contact of her soft, scarlet lips.

A noise in the passageway aroused them and he straightened swiftly, drawing back into place the protecting folds of the girl's burnouse, and shifting the cushions beneath her head that they might be more comfortable for her. Then, he turned to find Bou Hamara's eyes on him, but there was no suspicion in their depths; only solicitude.

"The wound," he said. "Is it better?"

"Healing nicely," Larry answered

"Tenderly, he lowered his head and touched the lips to the gleaming skin."

aware that the flood of crimson was ebbing from Benna's face, that her eyes were soft and star-like and dreamy. "The three days you have promised us will see Allal Abdi ready to travel again."

"It is well," said the other, and he placed the food. "As I told you, there is little enough time to spare. If you fulfill all that is expected of you, you will do well to be ready for the action that will come with the anniversary of the phophet's birth."

"Bou Hamara," said Larry calmly, dipping into his couscous, noting the Bena, too, eating hungrily, "if I knew where I am going and what I shall find there, aside from the Eye, I could hasten my actions."

"Who am I to tell you? Truly, Youssef el-Habbassi, you are a wizard and you should know more of the future than I who, at best, am a shop keeper or soldier, as occasion demands."

CAPT. LINDBERGH WILL "GO ON AIR" NEXT SATURDAY

HERO OF SKIES WILL BE HEARD BY RADIO FANS

Elaborate Hook-up to Carry Washington Ceremonies.

PRESIDENT BUSY

Flier Will Accompany Nation's Chieftain to Church.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Charles A. Lindbergh will "go on the air" as soon as he lands in the national capital next Saturday, it was indicated today.

An elaborate hook-up is being arranged to carry the ceremonies which will take place in the shadow of the Washington monument soon after the scout Cruiser Memphis docks. The lone eagle of the air also will be asked to make his bow before the microphone again at the reception of the Minnesota state society.

With a committee of cabinet officers and another composed of leading citizens of the capital steadily adding to the program, President Coolidge assumed the role of general chairman of the festivities.

State Dinner Planned.

But one quiet day of the three he will spend in Washington is planned for Capt. Lindbergh. He will have the opportunity on Sunday of accompanying the president and Mrs. Coolidge to church, with Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, his mother, as the fourth member of the party. On that day he also will place a wreath upon the tomb of the unknown soldier at Arlington and then visit disabled soldiers at Walter Reed hospital.

Perhaps the greatest official recognition paid the young flying ace will be a state dinner tendered at the temporary White House on the night of his arrival. The function is expected to be one of the most brilliant of the season, with the cabinet family, the highest officers of the army and navy and congressional leaders present..

Famous Fliers to Greet Lindy.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The army's most famous fliers were given permission today by the war department to fly to Washington to take part in the reception for Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh next Saturday.

Sister Ship Christened.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., June 4.—A sister ship of the monoplane which Captain Charlie L. Lindbergh flew from New York to Paris, will be christened "pride of San Diego" this afternoon and take off tomorrow morning for Washington, D. C., to greet the trans-Atlantic ace upon his arrival there.

Lindy Sails for Home

France traveling light, as he had come.

Lindbergh was piped over the side. The strains of the boatswains' whistles came ashore like shrill peeping birds, and again the band on the piers blared forth "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

Harbor craft shrieked a farewell with whistles and sirens. Crowds waved fluttering handkerchiefs. Then the boyish figure disappeared on the deck of the Memphis—a great adventure in amateur diplomacy had been ended and an undying hero was headed homeward.

The homeward-bound pennant went fluttering to the masthead of the Memphis, her funnels began belching smoke and soon her nose was pointed towards America.

Sees Hop-off of French Airmen.

LE BOURGET FLYING FIELD, France, June 4.—Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh arrived at the military airdrome at 8:30 o'clock from the American embassy in Paris to see the hop-off of the French airmen costes and Rignot for Siberia.

400 Children Will Enroll in Bible School on Monday

More than 400 children, between the ages of 4 and 14 years, are expected to enroll in the Vacation Bible school, which will open in the Sixth street school at 8:15 o'clock Monday morning. The classes, which will meet daily excepting Saturday and Sunday, will dismiss at 11:15 a. m.

The school will be in charge of Miss Alma Taylor, Chester, director of religious education in the public schools, and a corps of experienced instructors.

Hugh Fitzpatrick, Aged 77, Dies in Hanoverton Home

Hugh Fitzpatrick, 77, died yesterday in his home in Hanoverton, after a long illness of a complication of diseases.

Mr. Fitzpatrick, who was a life-long resident of Hanover township ,is survived by his widow, one son and two daughters: Lester Fitzpatrick, Magnolia; Mrs. Harvey Harris, and Mrs. W. G. Carle, both of Hanoverton.

Funeral services will be held at 20 o'clock Monday morning in St. Philips' Catholic church, Dungannon, in charge of Rev. T. T. Merchant. Burial will be made in Grove Hill cemetery, Hanoverton.

"I am Happy," Says Mother of Trans-ocean Flier

DENNISON, Iowa, June 4.—"I am happy that he has finally gotten away," Mrs. E. C. Chamberlin, mother of Clarence D. Chamberlin, who, with Charles A. Levine, today embarked on a non-stop trans-Atlantic flight, said today when informed that her son's flight was under way.

Chamberlin Hops Off

the official starting time at 6:05:37 (Eastern Daylight.)

Chamberlin was accompanied by Charles A. Levine, millionaire head of the Columbia Aircraft corporation, builders of the Columbia.

No official announcement was made as to the destination of the Bellanca plane—Columbia—but it was generally understood that Chamberlin would try to reach Berlin and go even farther if possible.

A copy of today's issue of the New York American was given to Chamberlin to deliver to the newspaper's correspondent in Berlin. The fact that Chamberlin said he would attempt to deliver it indicated that he had set Berlin as his goal.

2,000 See Take-off.

Two thousand persons, attracted to the field by reports that Chamberlin was about to start, saw the take-off. They broke into a cheer as the monoplane got away. The take-off was perfect, the runway being dry and not soggy as it was when Lindbergh started.

Chamberlin mode a false start at 6 o'clock but he taxied the Columbia back and within five minutes was off again on his proposed long flight.

"He's off!" the crowd cried as the Bellanca slid along the runway, lifted, then rose higher and higher as it charged into the east wind. It cleared the telegraph wires with a margin of seventy-five feet between the wires and the landing gear. Lindbergh's plane almost came to grief on these same wires.

The ship climbed steadily in the weak early morning sunlight which picked gold from its wings and struck sparks of silver from its fuselage.

Levine's Wife Collapses.

Levine's departure with Chamberlin was a surprise to everybody at the hangar and a distinct shock to his wife. All the assistance he will be able to give Chamberlin will be to hold "the stick" to steady the ship should Chamberlin have to release the control to attend to some other detail.

Mrs. Levine did not know her husband intended to make the perilous flight. She had been told that her husband was merely going to make a test flight. That was the reason, it was explained, why the false take off was purposely arranged. Mrs. Levine was on the field and saw both take-offs.

When she was told the second take-off was no test flight, she collapsed into the arms of a friend.

Mrs. Chamberlin Cries.

Mrs. Chamberlin did not come to the field to see her husband off. She said good-bye to him early today at the Garden City hotel.

He had been awakened at 3:30 a. m. He donned knickers and a windbreaker, instead of the usual flying outfit, because the Columbia has an enclosed cabin.

Tears coursed down Mrs. Chamberlin's face as her husband kissed her. He started to leave and she began sobbing audibly. He turned back, put his arms around her, and whispered something that made her smile through her tears. Again he said good-bye—and quickly walked out.

Message for Lindbergh.

Chamberlin was driven to the field in an automobile, arriving at 4:55 a. m. He had the car run over the runway to test its firmness. He seemed pleased, for he smiled.

Newspaper photographers crowded around him as he emerged from the car and he consented to pose with Levine. They stood beside the Columbia, smiling and chatting, as the pictures were taken.

Richard Pears, camera man who piloted another plane in the wake of Chamberlin's, returned and reported:

"He headed right over Long Island, constantly changing altitude. He started off at 500 feet, then got up to 1,000 feet, down to 500 feet again.

"I followed him to the tip of Long Island sound. He got a good break there. The mist opened and lifted right in front of him and the waters were visable, clear and bright under us."

Before he stepped into the cockpit for the take-off, Chamberlin left a message to be given to Captain Lindbergh. It said:

"Sorry not to wait to greet you back, but I have a break in the weather so am off."

Weather Conditions Ideal.

Weather conditions locally were ideal when the fliers got away. The sky was clear and a dead calm prevailed. Weather conditions between here and Nova Scotia were almost equally as good, except for patches of fog off the shore.

Although the destination of the Columbia was merely given as "Europe," it was understood that Chamberlin and Levine planned to travel as far as the fuel in the monoplane would take them, it might get only as far as the British Isles, perhaps it would go as far as Berlin, or even Vienna or Budapest. The main aspiration was to get the plane across the Atlantic safely and then have it carry as far as possible.

Chamberlin in Good Humor.

Chamberlin was in good humor as he posed for pictures. He was perfectly at ease and joked with the policemen.

A few minutes before the take-off Levine was almost shoved outside the police lines by an officer who did not recognize him.

Chamberlin carried with him letters which he will distribute in Europe. They were marked "Via air mail from the United States." Most of them are from friends of Chamberlin to friends or relatives in Europe.

Chamberlin and Levine took along ten chicken sandwiches made with toasted rye bread. Three sandwiches were enough for Lindbergh. Two bottles of chicken soup, a bottle of coffee and a half dozen oranges also were put aboard.

Carried Load of 5,400 Pounds.

The monoplane carried 451 gallons of gasoline and 18 gallons of oil. It was estimated that the total load of the Columbia was about 5,400 pounds, or 200 pounds more than Lindbergh carried.

The "Paris" part of the "New York-Paris" sign on the Columbia was painted out. So was the name "Bellanca." The designer, Bellanca, engaged in a dispute with Levine last month which delayed departure.

The Bellanca is powered by a Wright whirlwind motor. The plane is 8 feet 9 inches in height and from rudder to engine it is 26 feet 9 inches. It has the Bellanca struts which, engineers say, strengthen the plane and increase its lift. The big wing of the monoplane is 46 feet 6 inches in length. Its width, 6 feet 7 inches, is slightly narrower than Lindbergh's wing.

LINDY FLIES AWAY AFTER PARIS GOODBYE

American Hops Off for Lessay Field Near Cherbourg.

THANKS FRENCH

Last Official Ceremony Held at City Hall in Port.

PARIS, June 4.—Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh hopped off for Lessay flying field, near Cherbourg, at 9:25 o'clock this morning.

Lindbergh taxied out upon the field at 9:23 o'clock with Sergeant Charpentier standing in the rear seat calling instructions into the American's ear.

The plane rose easily and gracefully. It circled the field once gaining in altitude as it did so. Three minutes later—at 9:28 o'clock—20 French military planes took off to escort the famous American on his way north.

Charpentier occupied a seat where there was an emplacement for a machine gun.

Just before the take-off Lindbergh shook hands with Myron T. Herrick, the American ambassador, saying:

"Goodbye and thank you."

Ambassador Herrick responded:

"I am going to America in the summer and I shall probably see you."

"I hope so," said Lindbergh.

No Fuss About Departure.

Lindbergh shook hands with and said farewell to Parmely Herrick, son of the ambassador; Major Young and a score or more of French pilots. The French surrounded the young American showering good luck wishes upon him.

"I have had a fine time in Europe and I am grateful for the many honors I have received," said Lindbergh in saying goodbye. "The people were more than friendly. I don't know how to thank them."

There were no official ceremonies attending Lindbergh's departure. He wanted to get away quietly and without fuss.

The exact time of his departure from Le Bourget was in doubt up to the last minute. He was not expected to travel upon schedule, knowing that the cruiser Memphis would wait for him even if he did not reach Cherbourg until nightfall.

The last official ceremony for the young American hero was held at Cherbourg. The mayor of Cherbourg and members of the municipal council had extended an invitation to Lindbergh to call at city hall to enable the officials to pay their respects and to say farewell in the name of France.

Following the ceremonies at the Cherbourg city hall there was an automobile procession to the Gare Maritime where the Chamber of Commerce had arranged a reception. Capt. Lindbergh dedicated a marble plague recently placed there in his honor.

Both Cherbourg and Lessay were decorated with French and American flags in honor of the young American. His farewell was to be in a blaze of friendly glory.

French airmen pointed out to Lindbergh that the landing field near Cherbourg might prove treacherous to a strange aviator and they counselled him to travel as a passenger upon another airplanes. But Lindbergh did not want to establish a precendent after flying his own plane—even if a borrowed one—wherever he went in Europe. He wanted his last flight to be like all the others—a solitary Lindbergh affair.

Takes Passenger With Him.

While Lindbergh refused to travel to the coast as a passenger he finally consented to take a pasenger with him.

Also, at the last moment, he decided to take a Breget two-seater instead of the Nieuport single seater that had been selected for him. The Breguet is a biplane, whereas Lindbergh has always been used to flying a monoplane, but it made no difference to him.

The passenger with Lindbergh was French Sergeant Charpentuer, who occupied the observer's seat in the rear of the pilot's seat, where the American sat.

Ambassador Myron T. Herrick was visibly touched over the departure of his young guest. Like every one else who met him Herrick had become attached to the modest, unassuming young middle westerner. By his gentlemany conduct, his simplicity and his unfailing good humor Lindbergh had won the hearts of all.

French officials, in saying goodbye, expressed the hope that Lindbergh would come again and he promised to do so.

U. S. Navy Goes On Dress Parade For Its Commander

ABOARD THE PRESIDENTIAL YACHT MAYFLOWER, OFF CAPE HENRY, VA., June 4.—The United States navy went on dress parade today for its commander-in-chief, President Calvin Coolidge.

Some three miles off the coast of Cape Henry, 98 fighting vessels, the bulk of America's combined Atlantic and Pacific fleets, steamed slowly past the presidential yacht Mayflower to the accompaniment of roaring salutes and the seemingly ceaseless strains of the national anthem, bringing home forcibly to the president the might of the nation's naval establishment.

It was the first time in history that the two great armadas patrolling the widely separated coastlines of the United States had ever assembled for a joint review and Mr. Coolidge was presented with a sight unique in the memory of naval men. For two hours, vessel after vessel, guns bristling and gleaming under a brilliant sun and a cloudless sky, cruised by the anchored Mayflower, rails manned with the fighting men of the fleet.

BERLIN AWAITS COLUMBIA; ROME MAY BE GOAL

Germany Aroused to High Pitch of Excitement.

KEEN INTEREST

Field Cleared; Hindenburg Fleet Will Render Assistance.

BERLIN, June 4.—Germany is aroused to a high pitch of excitement over the possibility of Clarence Camberlin piloting his Bellanca plane to Berlin, and everyone is displaying the keenest interest.

This morning President Hindenburg made inquiries as to whether Chamberlin had actually started. As soon as the president learned of Chamberlin's departure he gave instructions that all departments of the government do everything possible to co-operate and aid the American flier.

Although Germany has no military air-force to aid in receiving Chamberlin it is preparing to give him all of the facilities of the best equipped passenger air service in Europe.

Templehofer Field Cleared.

Orders have been issued that Templehofer Field be cleared to receive Chamberlin. Huge searchlights have been wheeled into position to facilitate night landing.

The ministry of marine has issued orders to the entire German fleet, including a squadron now off Portugal, to render all assistance to Chamberlin and to report the progress of his flight. As soon as definite news of the progress of the flight is received the ministry of marine plans to dispatch a chain of destroyers and torpedo boats into the North Sea to form a guiding line for Chamberlin.

During the morning hours Germany was swept with contradictory reports. For several hours the official German News agency insisted that Chamberlin had started yesterday and when announcement was flashed on electric bulletin boards that he had postponed the flight great groans went up. The crowds hung on, however, and when at noon the news was again flashed that Chamberlin was in the air there were great cheers.

The American embassy is making plans to invite Chamberlin to be its guest in Berlin. Ambassador Schurman today conferred with Foreign Minister tresmann, regarding reception plans.

Plans Circular Sweep.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The Bellanca monoplane which set out from Roosevelt Field this morning for Europe is really bound for Rome, according to confidential advices reaching the United States coast guard headquarters here today from New York.

Admiral Billard, commandant, said he was advised that if Chamberlin, the pilot, finds weather conditions favorable after leaving the Newfoundland coast he will take a circular southern sweep across the Atlantic, and strike Europe along the southern coast of France.

The message was addressed to all ships at sea, all coast radio stations and to commercial wireless concerns in Europe.

Mayor Asks Old Pay

expect also to be a candidate to succeed myself this November, I hesitate to take an aggressive stand against this measure and bow to the dictates of your honorable body. Council must assume full responsibility for this measure.

"You have based your arguments for a reduction of salary on the fact that this city now has a municipal court and the mayor has no court duties. This is very true, but I am sure that an average of 30 minutes each day would do all police court work. You must also remember that when the mayor had the police court work, he received some fees from trial cases which made up a part of his compensation.

"During the year 1926, I collected in licenses, permits, etc., the sum of $1,946.71 or about $750 more than was ever collected before. I also added through a thorough check on all new buildings over $500,000 to the tax duplicate of this city. At the rate of 23 mills this will bring in each year $11,500. Now this was not done by sitting in an office but rather by aggressive work and a complete check on all work.

"For your information on this subject I am giving you in detail the facts on this subject from other cities in this state, just for comparison. The city of Bellaire, with a population of 15,000, has no court and pays the mayor $1,300. Marietta, with a population of 15,000, no court, pays $1,800 per year. The city of Barberton, population 18,000, no court, pays the mayor $2,800. Mansfield has no court, population 27,000, and pays $3,600 per year.

"Steubenville has a population of 28,000, no court, and pays $2,800. It is also very probable that this will be increased before next year. Massillon has a population of 17,000, a municipal court, and pays $2,400. It is also very probable that this will be increased.

"Ashtabula has a city manager form of government, has a municipal court, a population of 22,000, and pays the city manager $5,000 per year. Niles has no court, population 13,000 and pays $3,100. Canesville has a municipal court, population 29,000, and pays $2,000 per year. Wellsville, population 9,000, no court, pays $1,500 per year.

"Alliance with a population of 21,000 pays the mayor $3,000 per year. A municipal court was established nine years ago and after it was established the salary of the mayor was increased. With the establishment of the court the mayor lost fees from trial cases, which formerly made up a part of his compensation.

"From the above you can see that East Liverpool with a population of 24,000 will pay their mayor the sum of $1,2000 per year which is less than the salary paid by any other city enumerated. I feel that it is mend that your ordinance committee be instructed to bring in another ordinance raising the salary to the old figure of $1,800 per year.

CAPT. LINDBERGH WILL "GO ON AIR" NEXT SATURDAY

HERO OF SKIES WILL BE HEARD BY RADIO FANS

Elaborate Hook-up to Carry Washington Ceremonies.

PRESIDENT BUSY

Flier Will Accompany Nation's Chieftain to Church.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Charles A. Lindbergh will "go on the air" as soon as he lands in the national capital next Saturday, it was indicated today.

An elaborate hook-up is being arranged to carry the ceremonies which will take place in the shadow of the Washington monument soon after the scout Cruiser Memphis docks. The lone eagle of the air also will be asked to make his bow before the microphone again at the reception of the Minnesota state society.

With a committee of cabinet officers and another composed of leading citizens of the capital steadily adding to the program, President Coolidge assumed the role of general chairman of the festivities.

State Dinner Planned.

But one quiet day of the three he will spend in Washington is planned for Capt. Lindbergh. He will have the opportunity on Sunday of accompanying the president and Mrs. Coolidge to church, with Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, his mother, as the fourth member of the party. On that day he also will place a wreath upon the tomb of the unknown soldier at Arlington and then visit disabled soldiers at Walter Reed hospital.

Perhaps the greatest official recognition paid the young flying ace will be a state dinner tendered at the temporary White House on the night of his arrival. The function is expected to be one of the most brilliant of the season, with the cabinet family, the highest officers of the army and navy and congressional leaders present..

Famous Fliers to Greet Lindy.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The army's most famous fliers were given permission today by the war department to fly to Washington to take part in the reception for Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh next Saturday.

Sister Ship Christened.

Lindy Sails for Home

France traveling light, as he had come.

Lindbergh was piped over the side. The strains of the boatswains' whistles came ashore like shrill peeping birds, and again the band on the piers blared forth "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

Harbor craft shrieked a farewell with whistles and sirens. Crowds waved fluttering handkerchiefs. Then the boyish figure disappeared on the deck of the Memphis—a great adventure in amateur diplomacy had been ended and an undying hero was headed homeward.

The homeward-bound pennant went fluttering to the masthead of the Memphis, her funnels began belching smoke and soon her nose was pointed towards America.

"I am Happy," Says Mother of Trans-ocean Flier

DENNISON, Iowa, June 4.—"I am happy that he has finally gotten away," Mrs. E. C. Chamberlin, mother of Clarence D. Chamberlin, who, with Charles A. Levine, today embarked on a non-stop trans-Atlantic flight, said today when informed that her son's flight was under way.

Chamberlin Hops Off

the official starting time at 6:05:37 (Eastern Daylight.)

Chamberlin was accompanied by Charles A. Levine, millionaire head of the Columbia Aircraft corporation, builders of the Columbia.

No official announcement was made as to the destination of the Bellanca plane—Columbia—but it was generally understood that Chamberlin would try to reach Berlin and go even farther if possible.

A copy of today's issue of the New York American was given to Chamberlin to deliver to the newspaper's correspondent in Berlin. The fact that Chamberlin said he would attempt to deliver it indicated that he had set Berlin as his goal.

2,000 See Take-off.

Two thousand persons, attracted to the field by reports that Chamberlin was about to start, saw the take-off. They broke into a cheer as the monoplane got away. The take-off was perfect, the runway being dry and not soggy as it was when Lindbergh started.

Chamberlin mode a false start at 6 o'clock but he taxied the Columbia back and within five minutes was off again on his proposed long flight.

"He's off!" the crowd cried as the Bellanca slid along the runway, lifted, then rose higher and higher as it charged into the east wind. It cleared the telegraph wires with a margin of seventy-five feet between the wires and the landing gear. Lindbergh's plane almost came to grief on these same wires.

The ship climbed steadily in the weak early morning sunlight which picked gold from its wings and struck sparks of silver from its fuselage.

Levine's Wife Collapses.

Levine's departure with Chamberlin was a surprise to everybody at the hangar and a distinct shock to his wife. All the assistance he will be able to give Chamberlin will be to hold "the stick" to steady the ship should Chamberlin have to release the control to attend to some other detail.

Mrs. Levine did not know her husband intended to make the perilous flight. She had been told that her husband was merely going to make a test flight. That was the reason, it was explained, why the false take off was purposely arranged. Mrs. Levine was on the field and saw both take-offs.

When she was told the second take-off was no test flight, she collapsed into the arms of a friend.

Mrs. Chamberlin Cries.

Mrs. Chamberlin did not come to the field to see her husband off. She said good-bye to him early today at the Garden City hotel.

He had been awakened at 3:30 a. m. He donned knickers and a windbreaker, instead of the usual flying outfit, because the Columbia has an enclosed cabin.

Tears coursed down Mrs. Chamberlin's face as her husband kissed her. He started to leave and she began sobbing audibly. He turned back, put his arms around her, and whispered something that made her smile through her tears. Again he said good-bye—and quickly walked out.

Message for Lindbergh.

Chamberlin was driven to the field in an automobile, arriving at 4:55 a. m. He had the car run over the runway to test its firmness. He seemed pleased, for he smiled.

Newspaper photographers crowded around him as he emerged from the car and he consented to pose with Levine. They stood beside the Columbia, smiling and chatting, as the pictures were taken.

Richard Pears, camera man who piloted another plane in the wake of Chamberlin's, returned and reported: "He headed right over Long Island, constantly changing altitude. He started off at 500 feet, then got up to 1,000 feet, down to 500 feet again.

"I followed him to the tip of Long Island sound. He got a good break there. The mist opened and lifted right in front of him and the waters were visable, clear and bright under us."

Before he stepped into the cockpit for the take-off, Chamberlin left a message to be given to Captain Lindbergh. It said:

"Sorry not to wait to greet you back, but I have a break in the weather so am off."

Weather Conditions Ideal.

Weather conditions locally were ideal when the fliers got away. The sky was clear and a dead calm prevailed. Weather conditions between here and Nova Scotia were almost equally as good, except for patches of fog off the shore.

Although the destination of the Columbia was merely given as "Europe," it was understood that Chamberlin and Levine planned to travel as far as the fuel in the monoplane would take them, it might get only as far as the British Isles, perhaps it would go as far as Berlin, or even Vienna or Budapest. The main aspiration was to get the plane across the Atlantic safely and then have it carry as far as possible.

Chamberlin in Good Humor.

Chamberlin was in good humor as he posed for pictures. He was perfectly at ease and joked with the policemen.

A few minutes before the take-off Levine was almost shoved outside the police lines by an officer who did not recognize him.

Chamberlin carried with him letters which he will distribute in Europe. They were marked "Via air mail from the United States." Most of them are from friends of Chamberlin to friends or relatives in Europe.

Chamberlin and Levine took along ten chicken sandwiches made with toasted rye bread. Three sandwiches were enough for Lindbergh. Two bottles of chicken soup, a bottle of coffee and a half dozen oranges also were put aboard.

Carried Load of 5,400 Pounds.

The monoplane carried 451 gallons of gasoline and 18 gallons of oil. It was estimated that the total load of the Columbia was about 5,400 pounds, or 200 pounds more than Lindbergh carried.

The "Paris" part of the "New York-Paris" sign on the Columbia was painted out. So was the name "Bellanca." The designer, Bellanca, engaged in a dispute with Levine last month which delayed departure.

The Bellanca is powered by a Wright whirlwind motor. The plane is 8 feet 9 inches in height and from rudder to engine it is 26 feet 9 inches. It has the Bellanca struts which, engineers say, strengthen the plane and increase its lift. The big wing of the monoplane is 46 feet 6 inches in length. Its width, 6 feet 7 inches, is slightly narrower than Lindbergh's wing.

LINDY FLIES AWAY AFTER PARIS GOODBYE

American Hops Off for Lessay Field Near Cherbourg.

THANKS FRENCH

Last Official Ceremony Held at City Hall in Port.

PARIS, June 4.—Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh hopped off for Lessay flying field, near Cherbourg, at 9:25 o'clock this morning.

Lindbergh taxied out upon the field at 9:23 o'clock with Sergeant Charpentier standing in the rear seat calling instructions into the American's ear.

The plane rose easily and gracefully. It circled the field once gaining in altitude as it did so. Three minutes later—at 9:28 o'clock—20 French military planes took off to escort the famous American on his way north.

Charpentier occupied a seat where there was an emplacement for a machine gun.

Just before the take-off Lindbergh shook hands with Myron T. Herrick, the American ambassador, saying:

"Goodbye and thank you."

Ambassador Herrick responded:

"I am going to America in the summer and I shall probably see you."

"I hope so," said Lindbergh.

No Fuss About Departure.

Lindbergh shook hands with and said farewell to Parmely Herrick, son of the ambassador; Major Young and a score or more of French pilots. The French surrounded the young American showering good luck wishes upon him.

"I have had a fine time in Europe and I am grateful for the many honors I have received," said Lindbergh in saying goodbye. "The people were more than friendly. I don't know how to thank them."

There were no official ceremonies attending Lindbergh's departure. He wanted to get away quietly and without fuss.

The exact time of his departure from Le Bourget was in doubt up to the last minute. He was not expected to travel upon schedule, knowing that the cruiser Memphis would wait for him even if he did not reach Cherbourg until nightfall.

The last official ceremony for the young American hero was held at Cherbourg. The mayor of Cherbourg and members of the municipal council had extended an invitation to Lindbergh to call at city hall to enable the officials to pay their respects and to say farewell in the name of France.

Following the ceremonies at the Cherbourg city hall there was an automobile procession to the Gare Maritime where the Chamber of Commerce had arranged a reception. Capt. Lindbergh dedicated a marble plague recently placed there in his honor.

Both Cherbourg and Lessay were decorated with French and American flags in honor of the young American. His farewell was to be in a blaze of friendly glory.

French airmen pointed out to Lindbergh that the landing field near Cherbourg might prove treacherous to a strange aviator and they counselled him to travel as a passenger upon another airplanes. But Lindbergh did not want to establish a precendent after flying his own plane—even if a borrowed one—wherever he went in Europe. He wanted his last flight to be like all the others—a solitary Lindbergh affair.

Takes Passenger With Him.

While Lindbergh refused to travel to the coast as a passenger he finally consented to take a pasenger with him.

Also, at the last moment, he decided to take a Breget two-seater instead of the Nieuport single seater that had been selected for him. The Breguet is a biplane, whereas Lindbergh has always been used to flying a monoplane, but it made no difference to him.

The passenger with Lindbergh was French Sergeant Charpentuer, who occupied the observer's seat in the rear of the pilot's seat, where the American sat.

Ambassador Myron T. Herrick was visibly touched over the departure of his young guest. Like every one else who met him Herrick had become attached to the modest, unassuming young middle westerner. By his gentlemany conduct, his simplicity and his unfailing good humor Lindbergh had won the hearts of all.

French officials, in saying goodbye, expressed the hope that Lindbergh would come again and he promised to do so.

U. S. Navy Goes On Dress Parade For Its Commander

ABOARD THE PRESIDENTIAL YACHT MAYFLOWER, OFF CAPE HENRY, VA., June 4.—The United States navy went on dress parade today for its commander-in-chief, President Calvin Coolidge.

Some three miles off the coast of Cape Henry, 98 fighting vessels, the bulk of America's combined Atlantic and Pacific fleets, steamed slowly past the presidential yacht Mayflower to the accompaniment of roaring salutes and the seemingly ceaseless strains of the national anthem, bringing home forcibly to the president the might of the nation's naval establishment.

It was the first time in history that the two great armadas patrolling the widely separated coastlines of the United States had ever assembled for a joint review and Mr. Coolidge was presented with a sight unique in the memory of naval men. For two hours, vessel after vessel, guns bristling and gleaming under a brilliant sun and a cloudless sky, cruised by the anchored Mayflower, rails manned with the fighting men of the fleet.

BERLIN AWAITS COLUMBIA; ROME MAY BE GOAL

Germany Aroused to High Pitch of Excitement.

KEEN INTEREST

Field Cleared; Hindenburg Fleet Will Render Assistance.

BERLIN, June 4.—Germany is aroused to a high pitch of excitement over the possibility of Clarence Camberlin piloting his Bellanca plane to Berlin, and everyone is displaying the keenest interest.

This morning President Hindenburg made inquiries as to whether Chamberlin had actually started. As soon as the president learned of Chamberlin's departure he gave instructions that all departments of the government do everything possible to co-operate and aid the American flier.

Although Germany has no military air-force to aid in receiving Chamberlin it is preparing to give him all of the facilities of the best equipped passenger air service in Europe.

Templehofer Field Cleared.

Orders have been issued that Templehofer Field be cleared to receive Chamberlin. Huge searchlights have been wheeled into position to facilitate night landing.

The ministry of marine has issued orders to the entire German fleet, including a squadron now off Portugal, to render all assistance to Chamberlin and to report the progress of his flight. As soon as definite news of the progress of the flight is received the ministry of marine plans to dispatch a chain of destroyers and torpedo boats into the North Sea to form a guiding line for Chamberlin.

During the morning hours Germany was swept with contradictory reports. For several hours the official German News agency insisted that Chamberlin had started yesterday and when announcement was flashed on electric bulletin boards that he had postponed the flight great groans went up. The crowds hung on, however, and when at noon the news was again flashed that Chamberlin was in the air there were great cheers.

The American embassy is making plans to invite Chamberlin to be its guest in Berlin. Ambassador Schurman today conferred with Foreign Minister tresmann, regarding reception plans.

Plans Circular Sweep.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The Bellanca monoplane which set out from Roosevelt Field this morning for Europe is really bound for Rome, according to confidential advices reaching the United States coast guard headquarters here today from New York.

Admiral Billard, commandant, said he was advised that if Chamberlin, the pilot, finds weather conditions favorable after leaving the Newfoundland coast he will take a circular southern sweep across the Atlantic, and strike Europe along the southern coast of France.

The message was addressed to all ships at sea, all coast radio stations and to commercial wireless concerns in Europe.

Mayor Asks Old Pay

expect also to be a candidate to succeed myself this November, I hesitate to take an aggressive stand against this measure and bow to the dictates of your honorable body. Council must assume full responsibility for this measure.

"You have based your arguments for a reduction of salary on the fact that this city now has a municipal court and the mayor has no court duties. This is very true, but I am sure that an average of 30 minutes each day would do all police court work. You must also remember that when the mayor had the police court work, he received some fees from trial cases which made up a part of his compensation.

"During the year 1926, I collected in licenses, permits, etc., the sum of $1,946.71 or about $750 more than was ever collected before. I also added through a thorough check on all new buildings over $500,000 to the tax duplicate of this city. At the rate of 23 mills this will bring in each year $11,500. Now this was not done by sitting in an office but rather by aggressive work and a complete check on all work.

"For your information on this subject I am giving you in detail the facts on this subject from other cities in this state, just for comparison. The city of Bellaire, with a population of 15,000, has no court and pays the mayor $1,300. Marietta, with a population of 15,000, no court, pays $1,800 per year. The city of Barberton, population 18,000, no court, pays the mayor $2,800. Mansfield has no court, population 27,000, and pays $3,600 per year.

"Steubenville has a population of 28,000, no court, and pays $2,800. It is also very probable that this will be increased before next year. Massillon has a population of 17,000, a municipal court, and pays $2,400. It is also very probable that this will be increased.

"Ashtabula has a city manager form of government, has a municipal court, a population of 22,000, and pays the city manager $5,000 per year. Niles has no court, population 13,000 and pays $3,100. Zanesville has a municipal court, population 29,000, and pays $2,000 per year. Wellsville, population 9,000, no court, pays $1,500 per year.

"Alliance with a population of 21,000 pays the mayor $3,000 per year. A municipal court was established nine years ago and after it was established the salary of the mayor was increased. With the establishment of the court the mayor lost fees from trial cases, which formerly made up a part of his compensation.

"From the above you can see that East Liverpool with a population of 24,000 will pay their mayor the sum of $1,2000 per year which is less than the salary paid by any other city enumerated. I feel that it is mend that your ordinance committee be instructed to bring in another ordinance raising the salary to the old figure of $1,800 per year.

state should have a tax system precisely like that of every other state, but he does maintain that there must be some one general plan best suited for use in all states, a general plan to be modified and adapted according to the peculiar conditions existing in a given state.

He points out that about the only feature common to all state tax laws now is the general property tax, but even in that an utter lack of uniformity is found. In some state little effort is given to the assessment of tangible personal property. Some states try to tax intangible personal property at the general property rate, others employ a low rate of tax on intangibles, and others have resorted to income taxation as the best method of reaching intangibles. In Rhode Island, banks pay no tax on their shares, their capital, or their income; in Colorado, shares are taxed at the general property rate. In between these two extremes, financial institutions are taxed in the various states in different ways and at greatly varying rates.

To bring about a measure of uniformity, Mr. Graves says it will be necessary to establish and decide what the principal taxable abilities what the auxiliary sources of revenue should be, and the relatives amount of state and local revenue which should be exacted from each ability and each auxiliary source.

Then standard laws should be prepared for each tax, including the best administrative provisions, and after that would come the job of persuading 48 state legislatures to enact all or the more important of them.

Mr. Graves admits that it is rather an ambitious program.

Roped Men Battle Rocks.

BE IN CHURCH SUNDAY

"The Imminent God," Sermon By Rev. Donald W. MacLeod

Plaintive Cry of Job in Deep Despair After Tragedy Followed Tragedy is Discussed by Pastor of East Liverpool's First Presbyterian Church.

"O That I Knew Where I Might Find Him." Job 23:3.

This is the plaintive outcry of a man in deep despair. Job had experienced overwhelming reverses. Tragedy followed tragedy in swift succession, so that in the brief space of one day his property is swept away, his children are killed, and he himself is smitten with a loathsome disease.

"Sorrows crown of sorrows" in his case was that he could conceive no reason why such a succession of calamities should be allowed to overtake him. The belief of his age was that God presided over the destinies of men, and in the operation of a just and kindly providence meted out to each as he deserved. If men turned their backs on Him and lived wicked lives sooner or later, misfortune overtook them; and if they lived righteously the Almighty smiled on them, and they prospered.

But whatever truth that theory might contain, it neither comforted Job, nor offered a satisfying interpretation of his case, for he was not conscious of any wrong doing which would merit such overwhelming calamities as had overtaken him. He feels that the Almighty has treated him with deliberate injustice, and he would like the Almighty to explain.

But where is the Almighty to be found? Where is His dwelling place that he may come and plead his cause before Him? Up to this time Job believed that God was in direct contact with the world, exercising His sway over all nature and all mankind. But now that faith is gone, gone because his experience contradicted it, for he reasoned that if God, the watchful Creator, had anything to do with the history of human lives such a series of painful reverses would not have overtaken him.

When he looked into the experience of others he saw no more evidence of the overrulings of a just and benificent providence than there was in his own. The dark mystery which shadowed hist ife shadowed every other human life. He saw around him a world without any manifest tokens of moral purpose and order. Wrong remained unredressed; evil went unpunished; the tyrant sat on his throne and the innocent were crushed under the heel of His pitiless oppression. He reasoned that such injustice and suffering would not be allowed if God were in direct control of human life.

Baffled and confused, not knowing where in His boundless domain God hid Himself he cries out: "O that I knew where I might find Him."

This bitter outcry touches a responsive chord in countless hearts today. As a matter of fact, it articulates the supreme religious problem of this age, as, perhaps, it was the supreme religious problem of every past age—the problem of the whereabouts of God.

In our day there are few; if any persons of intelligence who deny the existence of th eSupreme Being. Even scientific deductions are today postulated on the supposition of a creative mind. But while the fact of God's existence is almost universally acknowledged, men say that they do not know where to find Him. They do not know where He keeps Himself. They cannot see that He is here, or this would be a different world. The thought of His presence does not harmonize, in their way of looking at it, with the injustice and wickedness, the sorrow and suffering they see in human life.

"There is a God," Carlyle is said to have exclaimed in a dark hour in his life, "but He does nothing!" That, I suppose, is substantially what Job thought when he gave utterance to the passionate cry of our text; and it is what thousands since his day have thought, and thousands are thinking today, although they may not have the hardihood to blurt it out as fearlessly and forcibly as Carlyle did.

Such attitude of mind let me say has its source in a wrong conception of God—the conception that He is a transcendent being, dwelling in some remote place above the clouds and the stars. And that nature runs of itself, propelled by the laws He established for it. He Himself is outside of it, and not in touch with its multiplied operations, excepting as occasionally he breaks in to perform a miracle, to inaugurate a great movement, or to answer a prayer. That is the idea of God we cherished when we were children.

It is well if we have outgrown it, for it is a false idea, and one which offers very little comfort to those who are struggling to make this a better world. What they need is not a God who dwells above the stars separated from His creation, but a God who is here, here with his people, sharing their burdens and sorrows, in the thick of every battle for righteousness, not simply trying to get all on earth to heaven, but to get some of heaven down to earth. And that is the God which both science and the Bible proclaims. Nature according to them is no mere machine operated by the energy of cold mechanical laws. Back of its all-perfect laws they affirm is a living will. The transcendent God they declare is also the imminent God.

Rev. D. W. MacLeod, D. D.

He is transcendent only in the qualities of His character, and not in the place of His abode or in the sphere of his activities.

And as God is in all the operations of nature, so also is He in the events of human life, not any more in the unusual and miraculous than He is in the ordinary and commonplace events of life, and ever working for the good of His children.

To say that is merely to articulate the uniform message of God's word, and to reaffirm the very central truth of the teaching of Jesus.

The God whom Jesus revealed was no being enthroned above the dim distances of the stars. He took God out of the remote where men's thoughts had placed Him, and he brought Him down to earth. He spoke of Him as the ever-present God, present in nature, guiding the planets in their flight, decking the hill sides with beauty, giving its purity to the lily and its blush to the rose; present in the life of the frailest creature, seeing after the insect which dances in the sunbeam, watching the birds on the housetop and guarding the sparrows in their flight so that not one falls to the ground without his notice; present in human life, in every joy and sorrow, in every failure and success, in every joy and sorrow, in every failure and success, in every pulse of health and every throb of pain, making the sun to rise on the evil and the good, and sending his rain upon the just and the unjust.

Jesus never viewed this as an orphaned world, nor ever exclaimed as Job did: "Oh that I knew where I might find him!" He always knew where God was. He knew that God was here. He traced his footsteps in the verdant fields, saw the touch of his hand in the beauty of the flowers, heard the whisper of his voice in the fanning breeze.

What indeed was He himself but God incarnate—God down here, God in the vestments of human flesh, God in the crowd, God looking after the sick, cheering the lonely, comforting the sorrowing, reclaiming the outcast, supporting the weak, subduing the evil, and releasing redemptive forces which would finally purify the stream of human history and make this a more wholesome and attractive world.

How then is this truth to be reconciled with all that is so grimly dark and tragic in human life? How about pain and sorrow? There existence is no proof that God is absent from human life, for pain and suffering are not essentially evil, they are benificent in their effects. They are the most effective instrumnts which God uss in the development of the human soul. His only begotten Son was made perfect through suffering, and that is the only way any soul can be made perfect.

God therefor is too vitally interested in the immortal well being of men to withhold even the most extreme ordeal of suffering if it is necessary to the soul's expansion and beauty and its development into the likeness of Christ. Consequently there is no "sparing men the process," as Browning says,, and the fact that there is no sparing of the process is the most conclusive and assuring proof that God is here, and in imminent and sympathetic touch with human life.

Recently I came across an anonymous poem which throws a flood of light on the problem of human pain and sorrow:

"The cry of man's anguish went up unto God:
Lord, take away pain—
The shadow that darkens the world thou hast made,
The close coiling chain
That strangles the heart, the burden that weighs
On the wings that would soar—
Lord, take away pain from the world thou hast made,
That it love Thee the more!

Then answered the Lord to the cry of His world:
Shall I take away pain,
And with it the power of the soul to endure,
Made strong by the strain?
Shall I take away pity that knits heart to heart,
And sacrifice high?
Will ye loose all your heroes that lift from the fire white brows to the sky?
Shall I take away love, that redeems with a price
And smiles at its loss?
Can ye spare from your lives, that would climb into mine,
The Christ on His cross."

Another fact which some cannot reconcile with belief in an imminent God is the existence of moral evil. If He is here, they ask, why does He permit it to exist Why does He allow truth to remain forever on the scaffold and wrong forever on the throne? Why does He not lay bare His holy arm and with one sweep of omnipotence clean the earth of its hoary iniquities?

All such questions have their origin in a very prevalent but false idea about God—the idea that God being omnipotent can do what He desires. Omnipotence, however, is not the power to do all things, but the power to do all possible things. There are some things that God cannot do, and one of them is to compel a free moral agent to do what he does not want to do.

God cannot make men good by force. He cannot change the world against its will. His heart bleeds for this world. The world's evil and cruelty and bloodshed does not worry and pain any mortal as it pains God. If He could He would sweep those things out fo existence in an instant of time. But He can effect a moral change only as humanity cooperates with Him as men open their hearts to Him, follow His guidance, and are willing to be the instruments of His power.

For the want of that cooperation moral progress makes slow advance, and God cannot do what He would like to do. But God is here, and busy at work, and the forces of evil are gradually yielding to His kingdom's sure increase—

"Where the vanguard rests today
The rear will rest tomorrow."

We may not be able to see the evidence of His presence in our age, but that does not prove that He is not here. Ages, like mountains, need a distant perspective to show what went on in them and what they accomplished. We are today sufficiently far from the age in which Carlyle thought that God was doing nothing to determine how much truth was in his hasty remark. We find that he was sadly mistaken. At that very moment the dawn of a new day was flushing the Eastern sky. Christian nations were waking to the iniquity of slavery. Lincoln was signing the Emancipation proclamation, which struck the chains from the limbs of a million slaves. Wesley was freeing England from its corrupting deism, and laying the foundations of the great Methodist Church. The soldiers of the Grand Army of the Republic in the hot fires of countless battlefields were welding this.

And the age in which we are living, of which so many speak in despairing terms, for they can see no evidence of divine activity in it, is nevertheless a great, divine age. In the perspective of future years it wil be seen to be one of the supreme creative epochs of human history.

You who have been saying: "Oh that I knew where I might find him, that I might come even to his seat," look around you. He is here, in your life and mine, in the events of each individual life and in the history of peoples and nations, hastening onward, as fast as human wilfulness will allow the far-off divine event to which the whole creation moves. He is an Imminent God!

Speak to Him, then, for He hears,
And spirit with spirit can meet,
Closer is He than breathing,
And nearer than hands or feet."

Intolerance Still Rages In Cleopatra's Gift City

Romantic Jaffa, Palestine's Port, City of Peter, Jonah, Crusaders, Napoleon and Other Celebrities, Where Bitter Struggle Between Races and Religions Continues Unabated.

By William T. Ellis.

Concrete geography may help make abstract truth real. Indeep, there are usually place considerations in public issues, such as the race question. Today's Lesson brings us face to face with the current problem of religious and racial tolerance. So let us first get a glimpse of where it all happened.

Peter has no monopoly of the fame of Joppa, the modern Jaffa, scene of the Lesson. Once this was literally Queen Cleopatra's City, a gift to her from Mark Anthony. Earlier it was Jonah's point of embarkment. More history has been crowded into this heaped-up habitation, one of the oldest in the world, than any teacher will be able to set forth. The Crusaders, Napoleon and Allenby, all wrote notable pages. Today it is a pivotal spot in the conflict between the Zionists and Arabs of Palestine. Cheek by jowl with it has risen lately, on the sand dunes to the north, built by American gifts, the modern all-Jewish city, of Tel-Aviv, where the problems, and perils of Zionism are concentrated.

Just outside of Jaffa, to the east, stand two memorials to Dorcas, whom Peter raised from the dead. One is a Christian and one is a Moslem shrine. A little further to the east, ancient Lydda, where Peter healed Aneas, the palsied man, is now Lud, the greatest railway junction in Palestine, where tourists from Egypt change cars for Jerusalem. Hard by, at Ramleh, is the tomb of St. George of the Dragon, the patron saint of England, who really was a fourth century Roman officer, and a Christian martyr. Up the coast from Jaffa, beyond Acre, lies Caesarea, now malaria-ridden, but in Peter's day a Roman capital where dwelt Cornelius, the centurion; and where later Paul was tried and sent to Rome.

A Present Issue That is Old.

In some respects, two thousand years seems to have taught the world little. My Jewish driver from Tel Avid was cursed in the streets of Jaffa, a year ago; and, similarly, my Arab driver from Jaffa met black looks and traffic annoyances in Tel-Avis. Intolerance is just as keen as it was in Peter's days and not in Palestine alone.

Most interesting and least pleasant of all the human figures to be seen in Jerusalem today are the orthodox Polish Jews, dressed in long velvet gowns and round hats, with greasy locks, and curls hanging down in front of their ears. They all seem underfed and underbathed. Yet they are the proudest people in the city, looking with contempt upon less orthodox Jews, and upon unbelievers. They embody the attitude of the Apostle Peter, when he was given his vision on the houstop of Simon the Tanner.

To this day, the Holy Land is the home of religious and racial strife. Our new western world is spacious-minded and tolerant in comparison; we have scarcely an analogy for the state of mind of the Apostle Peter, who would not eat certain foods forbidden by the Mosaic Law, and would not even carry the Good News of his risen Saviour to those outside of the Jewish nation, until taught by a vision, an angel, a special providence and a Divine outpouring.

That real religion is not ritual; that it is not dress of shibboleths or particular practices, is one of the hardest lessons for man to learn. A venerable and interesting Jew from Chicago, returned to the Holy Land to spend the end of his life, whom I met a year ago at the Wailing Place of the Jews in Perusalem, and who was notably catholic in his religious views, declared to me, "I tell you, if Christianity had adopted the Jewish dietary laws and the Jewish Sabbath, it would have swept the world." Despite his liberalism, this free-thinking Jew reverted to incidental prescriptions and proscriptions in this conception of religion. He would vote it a sorry day for Christianity when Peter saw and obeyed his vision! Each one of the many, many branches of the Christian church has similar peculiar limitations, some of them pathetically petty. A study of the history of American denominations affords a revelation of the capacity of good people for magnifying the non-essential.

A Good Man Out of the Fold.

God's clocks all strike in tune. While hungry Peter on his Joppa housetop was having his vision of a sheet let down from heaven containing all manner of living creatures to be eaten; up in Caesarea, a devout Roman centurion, not a Christian, was having a vision bidding him send to Joppa for Peter. This synchronization of providences, common in the experience of all devout persons, is an everyday evidence that One is ruling over all. The common meeting place of hopes and hearts is God. He who prepares the field also makes ready the force. With the need He provides the succor.

Because hunger is,
Bread needs must be."

How many times we are kept from stumbling in our souls, or heartened in a hard task, because distant dear ones are praying for us. Before ever science began to talk about telepathy or the wireless, the wonderful will of God was operating simultaneously near and far.

Our hero in these Lessons is Peter; but today we need also to get a firm hold of Cornelius the centurion. He represents the man who does not belong to our church, but who also seeks our God. What a multitude of these questing spirits there are in our time, unlabelled, unaffiliated, unorganized, but still the seeking servants of the Most High. Ours is notably the era of the spiritual quest. Especially outside of the churches there are an uncounted multitude of persons who are deeply concerned with religious questions. Their reverence, humility and teachableness are sure signs of the genuineness of their souls' thirst. We hail them as friends of God; and long for new Peters to show them that all their desires are fulfilled in Christ.

"Follow Your Gleam"

It took an angel from heaven to crack the crust of Peter's prejudices and orthodoxy; but once he saw the light, he went all the way, and journeyed up the coast to Caesarea. Similarly, when Cornelius had a vision, he followed it. Two men of action were these visionaries, ready to follow their gleam to the uttermost. Out of that loyalty came young Christianity's great revelation of the largeness of the Gospel which had been given to it. No barriers of race or creed should survive within the fellowship of the Church. Christianity, it was thus taught, was no mere glorified Judaism, but a universal faith, knowing no distinction between Jew and Gentile.

"For the love of God is broader,
Than the measure of man's mind;
And the heart of the Eternal
Is most wonderfully kind."

When Vision-obeying Peter came to Vision-obeying Cornelius, he opened his mouth and said, "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respector of persons; but in every nation he that feareth Him, and worketh righteousness, is acceptable to HIM." That does not sound like the Peter of the housetop, professing his ritualistic loyalty, does it? Ah, he had learned as he had gone on: by obedience had come light. Between Joppa and Caesarea he had pondered the meaning of his message; and so he dared to state this tremendous new truth of tolerance. Verily, it is a truth for our times that the Sunday Schools are studying today.

Then fell the Wonder. Upon that company of Gentiles and Jews, in the house of the Roman centurian, descended the mysterious Holy Spirit, with the same signs that had attended Pentecost. Peter dared follow his

"The Imminent God," Sermon By Rev. Donald W. MacLeod

Plaintive Cry of Job in Deep Despair After Tragedy Followed Tragedy is Discussed by Pastor of East Liverpool's First Presbyterian Church.

God cannot make men good by force. He cannot change the world against its will. His heart bleeds for this world. The world's evil and cruelty and bloodshed does not worry and pain any mortal as it pains God. If He could He would sweep those things out fo existence in an instant of time. But He can effect a moral change only as humanity cooperates with Him as men open their hearts to Him, follow His guidance, and are willing to be the instruments of His power.

For the want of that cooperation moral progress makes slow advance, and God cannot do what He would like to do. But God is here, and busy at work, and the forces of evil are gradually yielding to His kingdom's sure increase—

"Where the vanguard rests today
The rear will rest tomorrow."

We may not be able to see the evidence of His presence in our age, but that does not prove that He is not here. Ages, like mountains, need a distant perspective to show what went on in them and what they accomplished. We are today sufficiently far from the age in which Carlyle thought that God was doing nothing to determine how much truth was in his hasty remark. We find that he was sadly mistaken. At that very moment the dawn of a new day was flushing the Eastern sky. Christian nations were waking to the iniquity of slavery. Lincoln was signing the Emancipation proclamation, which struck the chains from the limbs of a million slaves. Wesley was freeing England from its corrupting deism, and laying the foundations of the great Methodist Church. The soldiers of the Grand Army of the Republic in the hot fires of countless battlefields were welding this.

And the age in which we are living, of which so many speak in despairing terms, for they can see no evidence of divine activity in it, is nevertheless a great, divine age. In the perspective of future years it wil be seen to be one of the supreme creative epochs of human history.

You who have been saying: "Oh that I knew where I might find him, that I might come even to his seat," look around you. He is here, in your life and mine, in the events of each individual life and in the history of peoples and nations, hastening onward, as fast as human wilfulness will allow the far-off divine event to which the whole creation moves. He is an Imminent God!

Speak to Him, then, for He hears,
And spirit with spirit can meet,
Closer is He than breathing,
And nearer than hands or feet."

Intolerance Still Rages In Cleopatra's Gift City

Romantic Jaffa, Palestine's Port, City of Peter, Jonah, Crusaders, Napoleon and Other Celebrities, Where Bitter Struggle Between Races and Religions Continues Unabated.

By William T. Ellis.

Concrete geography may help make abstract truth real. Indeep, there are usually place considerations in public issues, such as the race question. Today's Lesson brings us face to face with the current problem of religious and racial tolerance. So let us first get a glimpse of where it all happened.

Peter has no monopoly of the fame of Joppa, the modern Jaffa, scene of the Lesson. Once this was literally Queen Cleopatra's City, a gift to her from Mark Anthony. Earlier it was Jonah's point of embarkment. More history has been crowded into this heaped-up habitation, one of the oldest in the world, than any teacher will be able to set forth. The Crusaders, Napoleon and Allenby, all wrote notable pages. Today it is a pivotal spot in the conflict between the Zionists and Arabs of Palestine. Cheek by jowl with it has risen lately, on the sand dunes to the north, built by American gifts, the modern all-Jewish city, of Tel-Aviv, where the problems, and perils of Zionism are concentrated.

Just outside of Jaffa, to the east, stand two memorials to Dorcas, whom Peter raised from the dead. One is a Christian and one is a Moslem shrine. A little further to the east, ancient Lydda, where Peter healed Aneas, the palsied man, is now Lud, the greatest railway junction in Palestine, where tourists from Egypt change cars for Jerusalem. Hard by, at Ramleh, is the tomb of St. George of the Dragon, the patron saint of England, who really was a fourth century Roman officer, and a Christian martyr. Up the coast from Jaffa, beyond Acre, lies Caesarea, now malaria-ridden, but in Peter's day a Roman capital where dwelt Cornelius, the centurion; and where later Paul was tried and sent to Rome.

A Present Issue That is Old.

In some respects, two thousand years seems to have taught the world little. My Jewish driver from Tel Avid was cursed in the streets of Jaffa, a year ago; and, similarly, my Arab driver from Jaffa met black looks and traffic annoyances in Tel-Avis. Intolerance is just as keen as it was in Peter's days and not in Palestine alone.

Most interesting and least pleasant of all the human figures to be seen in Jerusalem today are the orthodox Polish Jews, dressed in long velvet gowns and round hats, with greasy locks, and curls hanging down in front of their ears. They all seem underfed and underbathed. Yet they are the proudest people in the city, looking with contempt upon less orthodox Jews, and upon unbelievers. They embody the attitude of the Apostle Peter, when he was given his vision on the houstop of Simon the Tanner.

To this day, the Holy Land is the home of religious and racial strife. Our new western world is spacious-minded and tolerant in comparison; we have scarcely an analogy for the state of mind of the Apostle Peter, who would not eat certain foods forbidden by the Mosaic Law, and would not even carry the Good News of his risen Saviour to those outside of the Jewish nation, until taught by a vision, an angel, a special providence and a Divine outpouring.

That real religion is not ritual; that it is not dress of shibboleths or particular practices, is one of the hardest lessons for man to learn. A venerable and interesting Jew from Chicago, returned to the Holy Land to spend the end of his life, whom I met a year ago at the Wailing Place of the Jews in Perusalem, and who was notably catholic in his religious views, declared to me, "I tell you, if Christianity had adopted the Jewish dietary laws and the Jewish Sabbath, it would have swept the world." Despite his liberalism, this free-thinking Jew reverted to incidental prescriptions and proscriptions in this conception of religion. He would vote it a sorry day for Christianity when Peter saw and obeyed his vision! Each one of the many, many branches of the Christian church has similar peculiar limitations, some of them pathetically petty. A study of the history of American denominations affords a revelation of the capacity of good people for magnifying the non-essential.

A Good Man Out of the Fold.

God's clocks all strike in tune. While hungry Peter on his Joppa housetop was having his vision of a sheet let down from heaven containing all manner of living creatures to be eaten; up in Caesarea, a devout Roman centurion, not a Christian, was having a vision bidding him send to Joppa for Peter. This synchronization of providences, common in the experience of all devout persons, is an everyday evidence that One is ruling over all. The common meeting place of hopes and hearts is God. He who prepares the field also makes ready the force. With the need He provides the succor.

Because hunger is,
Bread needs must be."

How many times we are kept from stumbling in our souls, or heartened in a hard task, because distant dear ones are praying for us. Before ever science began to talk about telepathy or the wireless, the wonderful will of God was operating simultaneously near and far.

Our hero in these Lessons is Peter; but today we need also to get a firm hold of Cornelius the centurion. He represents the man who does not belong to our church, but who also seeks our God. What a multitude of these questing spirits there are in our time, unlabelled, unaffiliated, unorganized, but still the seeking servants of the Most High. Ours is notably the era of the spiritual quest. Especially outside of the churches there are an uncounted multitude of persons who are deeply concerned with religious questions. Their reverence, humility and teachableness are sure signs of the genuineness of their souls' thirst. We hail them as friends of God; and long for new Peters to show them that all their desires are fulfilled in Christ.

"Follow Your Gleam"

It took an angel from heaven to crack the crust of Peter's prejudices and orthodoxy; but once he saw the light, he went all the way, and journeyed up the coast to Caesarea. Similarly, when Cornelius had a vision, he followed it. Two men of action were these visionaries, ready to follow their gleam to the uttermost. Out of that loyalty came young Christianity's great revelation of the largeness of the Gospel which had been given to it. No barriers of race or creed should survive within the fellowship of the Church. Christianity, it was thus taught, was no mere glorified Judaism, but a universal faith, knowing no distinction between Jew and Gentile.

"For the love of God is broader,
Than the measure of man's mind;
And the heart of the Eternal
Is most wonderfully kind."

When Vision-obeying Peter came to Vision-obeying Cornelius, he opened his mouth and said, "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respector of persons; but in every nation he that feareth Him, and worketh righteousness, is acceptable to HIM." That does not sound like the Peter of the housetop, professing his ritualistic loyalty, does it? Ah, he had learned as he had gone on: by obedience had come light. Between Joppa and Caesarea he had pondered the meaning of his message; and so he dared to state this tremendous new truth of tolerance. Verily, it is a truth for our times that the Sunday Schools are studying today.

Then fell the Wonder. Upon that company of Gentiles and Jews, in the house of the Roman centurian, descended the mysterious Holy Spirit, with the same signs that had attended Pentecost. Peter dared follow his gleam to the uttermost; so he declared, in defiance of all precedent, "Can any man forbid the water, that these should not be baptized, who have received the Holy Spirit, as well as we? And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ."

Later Peter was held to an accounting by the Church at Jerusalem for this radical liberalism; but his unanswerable reply was, "Who was I, that I could withstand God?" That day marked the beginning of the practice of universality in the Christian Church; and its message of tolerance is still the teaching for our own times.

Juvenile Bible Study

One question for each day is provided. The parent will find it interesting and helpful to have the child take up the question each day and aid it in finding the answer in the Scriptures, thus developing a knowledge of the Bible and where to find in it the things decided. Send or bring the little folks to the class Sunday at 1:45 p. m. The "Ceramic Cafeteria Auditorium," 121 West Fifth Street.

674. What did the Lord, through Daniel, tell us would happen during, or at, the close of "the time of the end?"

Answer: "There shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time." —Daniel 12:1.

675. Did our Lord Jesus tell us anything about this "time of trouble?"

Answer: Yes, you will find it in Matthew 24.21, which reads: "For then shall be great tribulation (trouble) such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no nor ever shall be (again)."

676. How severe is this "time of trouble" or "tribulation" to be?

Answer: See next verse (22) which reads: 'And except those days should be shortened there should be no flesh saved."

677. Are they to be shortened so that "all flesh" (human beings) should not be destroyed?

Answer: Yes; for the last of the verse (22) says: "But for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened."

678. When does Daniel say that this great time of trouble should begin?

Answer: See first part of Daniel 12:1, where we are told that it will begin when Michael stands up.

679. Who is Michael?

Answer: The word Michael means "who as God" and therefore signifies the Mighty One who, acting for Jehovah, will establish the long-promised kingdom on earth, for which we have been praying for nineteen hundred years, saying, "Thy kingdom come; they will be done in earth as it is done in heaven."

680. Is there any other expression that would confirm our thought that Michael means Jesus Christ?

Answer: Yes; for it says (Daniel 12:1): "Michael, the great prince." Prince means the son of a king, or one acting for the king. "The great price" therefore means the son of the great King of the universe. See Daniel 9:25, where it states that 'the prince" is "the Messiah"—Christ.

For who loves that must first be wise and good. —Milton.

Life is not so short but that there is always time enough for courtesy. —Emerson.

The Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?—Psalm 27:1.

Then welcome each rebuff
That turns earth's smoothness rough,
Each sting that bids nor sit nor stand, but go!
Be our joys three-parts pain!
Strive, and hold cheap the strain;
Learn, nor account the pang;
Dare, never grudge the throe!
—Robert Browning.

I find that the best virtue I have has in it some tincture of vice.—Michael De Montaigne.

One question for each day is provided. The parent will find it interesting and helpful to have the child take up the question each day and aid it in finding the answer in the Scriptures, thus developing a knowledge of the Bible and where to find in it the things decided. Send or bring the little folks to the class Sunday at 1:45 p. m. The "Ceramic Cafeteria Auditorium," 121 West Fifth Street.

674. What did the Lord, through Daniel, tell us would happen during, or at, the close of "the time of the end?"

Answer: "There shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time." —Daniel 12:1.

675. Did our Lord Jesus tell us anything about this "time of trouble?"

Answer: Yes, you will find it in Matthew 24.21, which reads: "For then shall be great tribulation (trouble) such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no nor ever shall be (again)."

676. How severe is this "time of trouble" or "tribulation" to be?

Answer: See next verse (22) which reads: 'And except those days should be shortened there should be no flesh saved."

677. Are they to be shortened so that "all flesh" (human beings) should not be destroyed?

Answer: Yes; for the last of the verse (22) says: "But for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened."

678. When does Daniel say that this great time of trouble should begin?

Answer: See first part of Daniel 12:1, where we are told that it will begin when Michael stands up.

679. Who is Michael?

Answer: The word Michael means "who as God" and therefore signifies the Mighty One who, acting for Jehovah, will establish the long-promised kingdom on earth, for which we have been praying for nineteen hundred years, saying, "Thy kingdom come; they will be done in earth as it is done in heaven."

680. Is there any other expression that would confirm our thought that Michael means Jesus Christ?

Answer: Yes; for it says (Daniel 12:1): "Michael, the great prince." Prince means the son of a king, or one acting for the king. "The great price" therefore means the son of the great King of the universe. See Daniel 9:25, where it states that 'the prince" is "the Messiah"—Christ.

"TEMPTRESS" AT AMERICAN

Greta Garbo Plays Title Role in Ibanez Story.

Research that covered almost the entire globe was necessary in the production of the sensational new Cosmopolitan spectacle "The Temptress," sensational novel of Paris and South America, will be shown Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the American theatre as one of the big features of the season.

Laid in European cities, Buenos Aires and the wilds of South America; the range in scenic design and costuming, types of actors and methods of characterization proved enormous; the production was staged at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios on a gorgeous scale, and directed by Fred Niblo.

Greta Garbo, the famous Swedish screen beauty, appears in the title role as "Elena," the Parisian charmer, whose charms wreck the lives of all men who come under her uncanny spell, and Antonio Moreno plays "Tobledo," the South American engineer, who survives her enchantments.

Cast is Notable.

The cast is a notable one, including Lionel Barrymore, the famous stage and screen player, who has contributed many well known characterizations to the screen; Roy D'Arcy, the famous "crown prince" of "The Merry Widow," Kathleen Key, the "Tirzah" of "Ben-Hur," Alys Murrell, Armand Kaliz, Inez Gomez, Antonio D'Algy and other players of note.

A sensational duel with bull whips, after the manner of the plainsmen of South America, is staged by Antonio Moreno and Roy D'Arcy, who, stripped to the waist, slash at each other in the most terrible form of duel known; the wreck of a huge dam in the Andes is another sensational spectacle in the big production.

Glittering revels in the cafes of Paris and in the gay resorts of Buenos Aires furnish kaleidoscopic spectacle to contrast with the grim battles in the tropic wilderness.

Dorothy Farnum, scenarist of "The Torrent," scenarized the new story from Ibanez' novel.

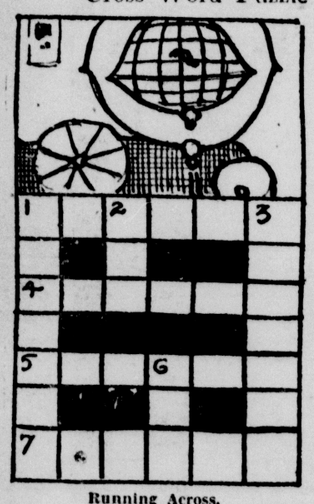

Bengal Bandits Behead Two.

Bandits used high-power methods in a hold-up at the railway station at Saharse, Bengal, recently. A party of business men had come from the interior to sell elephants at the Singhesivar Mela, which is held every year during the celebration of the Sivaratri festival. They were waiting at night for the train to return home when one of the bandits rang the station bell, and passengers, including two companions of the party, rushed to the ticket office to buy tickets. Then 30 armed bandits surrounded the elephant dealers and snatched all their purses, containing $11,000 in cash. In the battle that followed two of the dealers were beheaded and three others seriously injured. During the struggle all passengers fled and the stationmaster bolted his door. An investigation of the hold-up is being made by government officials.

Pollution of the waters of Bull creek in Middleton township, which in turn has polluted the waters of Big Beaver creek in both Middleton and St. Clair townships has been reported to the state board of health, and a special representative of the state board is to arrive in Lisbon Monday to conduct an exhaustive investigation.

This pollution has been traced to the abandoned Townsend coal mine near Rogers which is now being drained, and this water is being allowed to flow into Bull and Big Beaver Creeks.

Farmers have been unable to water their stock from the waters of these streams. Deputy Game Warden L. W. Boring has reported to the department of agriculture that thousands of fish in these streams have been killed.

Water is now flowing from the abandoned mine in a four-foot stream, and it is said that it will require about a month to drain the mine.

Telegrams have been sent to Columbus complaining about the pollution, and the matter has also been referred to the county board of health, which will act in conjunction with the state department of health and state department of agriculture.

Dundee Crowned Welter Champ In Decision Over Pete Latzo

Title Holder Falls Before Challenger's Telling Body Blows

Scranton Coal Miner, Weakened by Drying Out for Weight Limit Requirements, Goes Down Fighting, Unable, Though, to Stand Pace.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Since the day of Napoleon—the one who wasn't in a padded cell—it has been a generally accepted fact that an army moves on its stomach but last night at the Polo grounds it was discovered for the first time that it is possible to travel to a world's championship on another man's kidneys. Baltimore supplied the traveler in Joe Dundee but Pete Latzo, of Scranton, Pa., supplied the kidneys and that was the only mistake he made.

In consequence of this exchange of courtesies, Dundee today was the new welterweight champion of the world and Latzo merely one of the boys again, a fighter with a past. It was a great fight and a fair decision, although close enough to force Dundee to carry the fifteenth and last round in order to get it.

Latzo died with his boots on, as a real fighting man must. He had to undergo devastating punishment before he ever put foot in the ring in order to whittle himself down to limit of 147 pounds and, according to a story at the ringside, had to receive the ministrations of a physician because it was alleged the weight reduction had impaired his kidneys.

Dundee at Heights.

Baltimore had sent its third world's champion into the archives of ring greatness.

In case there may be a waning doubt of the matter, let it be said that Dundee approached real greatness last night. He, of course, knew not the greatness that was Gans', Baltimore's first and best, but his pedestal today was no lower than that which was occupied by Kid Williams, the third champion.

As a matter of fact, only a man approaching greatness could have beaten Latzo last night. The latter was toppled from the throne but as he fell he went down swinging and the result was one of the best championship fights seen here under the modern code.

They started like a pair of prize waltzers, apparently content to feel each other out. Latzo carried the first two rounds on aggressiveness alone, the action being tepid and the wrestling something fierce. The third was even, Dundee going to work with his right to the kidneys and that tell-tale, whitewashed look appeared in the vicinity of Latzo's eyes.

The body punishment got him altogether in the fourth and, except for one long left to the jaw, the coal miner hardly landed a punch. It was Dundee and his right to the kidneys all the way and the fifth round was much the same, only more so.

Kidneys Tell on Latzo.

As they came out for the sixth, Latzo's attitude showed that he meant to get his man early or admit that it wasn't in him. He swarmed all over Joseph, swinging left and rights as fast as he could get them going and bulled his way to the round on points. He carried the seventh the same way, led at the way through the eighth and, toward the end of the round, hurt Joe badly with a left to the body and a right to the jaw.

But, just when everything looked good, Latzo was overtaken by his kidneys again and Dundee came out for the ninth to take the play away from Pete and he did. Joe was the man who was doing all the crowding and punching now. He was a mile ahead on points when Latzo swung a left and right out of nowhere, clipped that trick jaw with both and Dundee's knees did an accordian act.

He won the round, however, and the tenth and eleventh also, landing his best punch of the fight in the latter, a left hook to the jaw that sent Latzo into a semi-collapse against the ropes, but Pete came back fighting and just at the bell sent over a right that did Dundee almost no good. Nor did an accidental butt over Latzo's eye help the latter a great deal.

The twelfth saw Latzo take charge again. And how he plied Dundee with lefts to the body and jaw and then crossed a right that made Dundee blink rapidly and cover up. Just before the bell, a left hook to Dundee's jaw almost settled him again.

Makes Great Finish.

Each fought the thirteenth as though it was the last round of his life and there was nothing to choose between them at the end. But Latzo was mortally tired now, his punches lacked the snap of the early rounds and his movements became aimless and inert.

It was Dundee's great moment, the chance for a winning sprint in the last 100 yards, and he made the most of it. Crowding, forcing, feinting and swinging in a bewildered maze of movement, he clipped and hooked and smashed Latzo about the ring during a left hook in the fourteenth and again with a left and right in the final the last two rounds, hurting him with round, tossed at Latzo just as the latter caught his hands in the ropes.

Latza wasn't out-gamed; he was outfinished, that tells the story; that, the flying fists of a man who knew his kidneys.

TURK NASH BLANKED, 2-0

Digman Allows Two Hits as Laughlin Wins.

Unable to hit while their opponents twice bunched a couple of safe drives for as many runs, Turk-Nash sustained a second successive shutout from Lauhglin in City Industrial league contest at Newell park last evening. The score was 2 to 0. The result places Laughlin and Chester in first place, each having lost one and won seven games.

Digman, twirling for Laughlin, all b t duplicated Ashe's performance of the day before at Columbian park when he held the usually heavy hitting autoists to one lone bingle in the final period of play. Not until two men were out in the sixth did a Turk-Nash hitter connect safely with Dignan's slants. Then McConnell drove a double to left, but he got no farther as W. Mundy flew to W. Watson.

Digman allowed but one other hit, a single by Deshler after two men were out in the seventh. He was the twenty-fifth batter facing Digman as was E. Mundy, who made the only bingle off Ashe in the Thursday clash between the clubs. McConnell, making the first of these two hits was the twenty-first swatter to receive the Didman curves.

Despite the making of but three safe drives in two days as against 13 by Laughlin in the two contests Turk-Nash fought gamely all the way. The game thus abounded in thrills with both clubs contributing flashes in the playing.

Digman was given almost faultless support, a dropped ball by W. Watson in the fourth off McConnell's bat and a boot by Finley of A. Bayley's drive in the first being the victor's only miscues.

No Turk-Nash player got beyond second base and but five of them even reached fist bast: McConnell twice on a hit and an error, A. Bayley by error, Deshler by a hit and J. Watson by a walk at the outset of the third.

Digman made no effort to strikeout his opponents as he fanned but one—Kinney in the third. He also walked but one player. He depended entirely on fast support and got it.

Wellsville Loses 4 to 3 Decision to Potters.

By a margin of one run, K. T. K. defeated the Wellsville Nash Motors in a City Industrial league contest at Columbian park last evening, 4 to 3.

Howell twirled for the potters and held the down-river batters to six hits. Huffman, for the losers, permitted two less blows, but errors behind him made possible the short end of the scoring by his club.

In the third Howell and Fisher bunched a couple of doubles, the former scoring.

Two more runs were made by K. T. K. in the fourth. An error by D. Morgan put Scullion on. Montgomery reached the paths on a safe drive. Both counted on Kinsey's double to right.

Hunselman, doubling to middle in the fifth, took third on Hayes' grounder and scored on Huffman's wild pitch.

D. Morgan and S. Coleman led both teams in hitting with two hits each in three attempts.

Dundee Crowned Welter Champ In Decision Over Pete Latzo

Title Holder Falls Before Challenger's Telling Body Blows

Scranton Coal Miner, Weakened by Drying Out for Weight Limit Requirements, Goes Down Fighting, Unable, Though, to Stand Pace.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Since the day of Napoleon—the one who wasn't in a padded cell—it has been a generally accepted fact that an army moves on its stomach but last night at the Polo grounds it was discovered for the first time that it is possible to travel to a world's championship on another man's kidneys. Baltimore supplied the traveler in Joe Dundee but Pete Latzo, of Scranton, Pa., supplied the kidneys and that was the only mistake he made.

In consequence of this exchange of courtesies, Dundee today was the new welterweight champion of the world and Latzo merely one of the boys again, a fighter with a past. It was a great fight and a fair decision, although close enough to force Dundee to carry the fifteenth and last round in order to get it.

Latzo died with his boots on, as a real fighting man must. He had to undergo devastating punishment before he ever put foot in the ring in order to whittle himself down to limit of 147 pounds and, according to a story at the ringside, had to receive the ministrations of a physician because it was alleged the weight reduction had impaired his kidneys.

Dundee at Heights.

Baltimore had sent its third world's champion into the archives of ring greatness.

In case there may be a waning doubt of the matter, let it be said that Dundee approached real greatness last night. He, of course, knew not the greatness that was Gans', Baltimore's first and best, but his pedestal today was no lower than that which was occupied by Kid Williams, the third champion.

As a matter of fact, only a man approaching greatness could have beaten Latzo last night. The latter was toppled from the throne but as he fell he went down swinging and the result was one of the best championship fights seen here under the modern code.

They started like a pair of prize waltzers, apparently content to feel each other out. Latzo carried the first two rounds on aggressiveness alone, the action being tepid and the wrestling something fierce. The third was even, Dundee going to work with his right to the kidneys and that tell-tale, whitewashed look appeared in the vicinity of Latzo's eyes.

The body punishment got him altogether in the fourth and, except for one long left to the jaw, the coal miner hardly landed a punch. It was Dundee and his right to the kidneys all the way and the fifth round was much the same, only more so.

Kidneys Tell on Latzo.

As they came out for the sixth, Latzo's attitude showed that he meant to get his man early or admit that it wasn't in him. He swarmed all over Joseph, swinging left and rights as fast as he could get them going and bulled his way to the round on points. He carried the seventh the same way, led at the way through the eighth and, toward the end of the round, hurt Joe badly with a left to the body and a right to the jaw.

But, just when everything looked good, Latzo was overtaken by his kidneys again and Dundee came out for the ninth to take the play away from Pete and he did. Joe was the man who was doing all the crowding and punching now. He was a mile ahead on points when Latzo swung a left and right out of nowhere, clipped that trick jaw with both and Dundee's knees did an accordian act.

He won the round, however, and the tenth and eleventh also, landing his best punch of the fight in the latter, a left hook to the jaw that sent Latzo into a semi-collapse against the ropes, but Pete came back fighting and just at the bell sent over a right that did Dundee almost no good. Nor did an accidental butt over Latzo's eye help the latter a great deal.

The twelfth saw Latzo take charge again. And how he plied Dundee with lefts to the body and jaw and then crossed a right that made Dundee blink rapidly and cover up. Just before the bell, a left hook to Dundee's jaw almost settled him again.

Makes Great Finish.

Each fought the thirteenth as though it was the last round of his life and there was nothing to choose between them at the end. But Latzo was mortally tired now, his punches lacked the snap of the early rounds and his movements became aimless and inert.

It was Dundee's great moment, the chance for a winning sprint in the last 100 yards, and he made the most of it. Crowding, forcing, feinting and swinging in a bewildered maze of movement, he clipped and hooked and smashed Latzo about the ring during a left hook in the fourteenth and again with a left and right in the final the last two rounds, hurting him with round, tossed at Latzo just as the latter caught his hands in the ropes.

Latza wasn't out-gamed; he was outfinished, that tells the story; that, the flying fists of a man who knew his kidneys.

TURK NASH BLANKED, 2-0

Digman Allows Two Hits as Laughlin Wins.

Unable to hit while their opponents twice bunched a couple of safe drives for as many runs, Turk-Nash sustained a second successive shutout from Laughlin in City Industrial league contest at Newell park last evening. The score was 2 to 0. The result places Laughlin and Chester in first place, each having lost one and won seven games.

Digman, twirling for Laughlin, all b t duplicated Ashe's performance of the day before at Columbian park when he held the usually heavy hitting autoists to one lone bingle in the final period of play. Not until two men were out in the sixth did a Turk-Nash hitter connect safely with Dignan's slants. Then McConnell drove a double to left, but he got no farther as W. Mundy flew to W. Watson.

Digman allowed but one other hit, a single by Deshler after two men were out in the seventh. He was the twenty-fifth batter facing Digman as was E. Mundy, who made the only bingle off Ashe in the Thursday clash between the clubs. McConnell, making the first of these two hits was the twenty-first swatter to receive the Didman curves.

Despite the making of but three safe drives in two days as against 13 by Laughlin in the two contests Turk-Nash fought gamely all the way. The game thus abounded in thrills with both clubs contributing flashes in the playing.

Digman was given almost faultless support, a dropped ball by W. Watson in the fourth off McConnell's bat and a boot by Finley of A. Bayley's drive in the first being the victor's only miscues.

No Turk-Nash player got beyond second base and but five of them even reached fist bast: McConnell twice on a hit and an error, A. Bayley by error, Deshler by a hit and J. Watson by a walk at the outset of the third.

Digman made no effort to strikeout his opponents as he fanned but one—Kinney in the third. He also walked but one player. He depended entirely on fast support and got it.

By a margin of one run, K. T. K. defeated the Wellsville Nash Motors in a City Industrial league contest at Columbian park last evening, 4 to 3.

Howell twirled for the potters and held the down-river batters to six hits. Huffman, for the losers, permitted two less blows, but errors behind him made possible the short end of the scoring by his club.

In the third Howell and Fisher bunched a couple of doubles, the former scoring.

Two more runs were made by K. T. K. in the fourth. An error by D. Morgan put Scullion on. Montgomery reached the paths on a safe drive. Both counted on Kinsey's double to right.

Hunselman, doubling to middle in the fifth, took third on Hayes' grounder and scored on Huffman's wild pitch.

D. Morgan and S. Coleman led both teams in hitting with two hits each in three attempts.

10 WINS FOR SOX HURLER

Thomas First Major Pitcher to Reach Mark This Year.

By Les Conklin.

NEW YORK, June 4. — Alphonse Thomas, sensational young pitcher of the Chicago White Sox, is the first pitcher in the majors to win ten games this season. He has lost only two decisions and should easily better his record of last year when he won 15 games with a second division club.

Thomas beat the Red Sox yesterday, 5 to 1, and Chicago advanced to within 1 1-2 games of the Yankees.

"Tiny" Tavener, of Detroit, who hits only one homer a year in his good years, contributed his 1927 quota yesterday against Pennock of the Yankees and it enabled the Tigers to beat the champions for the first time this season, 3 to 1.

The best pitching exhibition of the day was turned in by Virgil Barnes, of the Giants. He held the Reds to three hits and won in a canter, 6 to 0, putting New York in second place.

Vic Aldridge of the Pirates was almost as effective, limiting the Phillies to four bingles and winning, 11 to 1, as his mates pounded out 15 hits, including three homers.

Stewart, youthful prodigy of the St. Louis Browns, made it four victories out of five starts by subduing the Senators, 8 to 4.

Cleveland got three runs off Jack Quinn in the first inning and then called it a day's work, winning, 3 to 1, behind Lefty Miller's airtight pitching.

The Braves knocked Guy Bush out of the box but barely staggered to the wire ahead of the Cubs, 5 to 4.

Rain held the Robins and Cardinals idle.

Fight's Results.

AT NEW YORK—Joe Dundee, Baltimore, won world's welterweight championship by gaining decision over Pete Latzo, Scranton, Pa., 15 rounds.

George Courtney, Tulsa, Okla., won from K. O. Phila Kaplan, of New York, on foul in second round.

Nick Testo, Troy, N. Y., won decision over George Levine, Brooklyn, 8 rounds.

10 WINS FOR SOX HURLER

Thomas First Major Pitcher to Reach Mark This Year.

By Les Conklin.

NEW YORK, June 4. — Alphonse Thomas, sensational young pitcher of the Chicago White Sox, is the first pitcher in the majors to win ten games this season. He has lost only two decisions and should easily better his record of last year when he won 15 games with a second division club.

Thomas beat the Red Sox yesterday, 5 to 1, and Chicago advanced to within 1 1-2 games of the Yankees.

"Tiny" Tavener, of Detroit, who hits only one homer a year in his good years, contributed his 1927 quota yesterday against Pennock of the Yankees and it enabled the Tigers to beat the champions for the first time this season, 3 to 1.

The best pitching exhibition of the day was turned in by Virgil Barnes, of the Giants. He held the Reds to three hits and won in a canter, 6 to 0, putting New York in second place.

Vic Aldridge of the Pirates was almost as effective, limiting the Phillies to four bingles and winning, 11 to 1, as his mates pounded out 15 hits, including three homers.

Stewart, youthful prodigy of the St. Louis Browns, made it four victories out of five starts by subduing the Senators, 8 to 4.

Cleveland got three runs off Jack Quinn in the first inning and then called it a day's work, winning, 3 to 1, behind Lefty Miller's airtight pitching.

The Braves knocked Guy Bush out of the box but barely staggered to the wire ahead of the Cubs, 5 to 4.

Rain held the Robins and Cardinals idle.

Fight's Results.

AT NEW YORK—Joe Dundee, Baltimore, won world's welterweight championship by gaining decision over Pete Latzo, Scranton, Pa., 15 rounds.

George Courtney, Tulsa, Okla., won from K. O. Phila Kaplan, of New York, on foul in second round.

Nick Testo, Troy, N. Y., won decision over George Levine, Brooklyn, 8 rounds.

WASHINGTON STEWART'S LETTER.

MANY FLOOD CONTROL SCHEMES POUR IN ON ENGINEER OFFICERS

By Charles P. Stewart.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Mississippi valley flood control ideas are pouring in on the government in a tide not much less than that of the latest flood itself.

When Maj. Gen. Jadwin gets back from the stricken district to his headquarters, as chief of the army engineers, he'll find his office swamped by them.

Brig. Gen. Deakyne of the rivers and harbors board is up to his neck in a similar inundation.

Secretary Hoover's suite at the commerce department is fairly drowned out with suggestions.

The weather bureau is getting plenty of the overflow.

It will be weeks before the last dotty scheme has been drained off into its appropriate wastebasket.

OF course the engineers and others like to get really practical hints, but some they've received (say about 99 and a fraction per cent) hardly promises to work out, put to the test.

For instance, one proposal calls for a lot of trap doors, "to let the water out."

Obviously this is too vague. Let it out where? The engineers can't figure out whether a double-deck river is meant, or a conduit to carry off the surplus, or what.

ANOTHER man favors powerful pumps to drive the floods into the Gulf of Mexico at a swifter lick. If they don't go on downstream fast enough to make room for a rising river behind, he urges, give 'em a shove.

As an alternative to a push from the rear, another engineer argues for suction—the principle of the tractor in preference to the propellor.

A fourth program contemplates turning the Mississippi's big tributaries, like the Missouri and the Ohio, more directly to the southward, so as to make them empty into the Gulf through mouths of their own, instead of joining the Father of Waters. Expensive, yes!—but think what it would save in flood damages.

Scouring out the Gulf has an advocate. He believes it could be done with compressed air. Simply blow the sand and sediment out of the Gulf's bed into the Atlantic, in a series of gigantic puffs, as you'd blow dust off the piano top by lung power.

QUITE a few authorities hold that the situation would be improved if farmers would plow lengthwise of the river valleys and 'round and 'round the hill, rather than crosswise of the valleys and straight up and down the hills, so as to hold the water in the furrows instead of letting it escape so fast.

The government engineers, by the way, don't regard this as such a bughouse notion. They say it might not stop floods but it would help.

However, they aren't very hopeful that farmers in regions which aren't subject to floods, and consequently don't care one way or the other, ever can be prevailed on to adopt that method of plowing if it doesn't suit their convenience.

That's where they get a useful tip from some of their volunteer advisors, who want a law passed penalizing any other kind of plowing, with fines and imprisonment.

AT that, there are government engineers who predict that any number of the anti-flood plans they expect to come up in congress next winter will be fully as weird as most of those they're having dumped on them now.

Never Too Late

BUTLER DISTRICT SCHOOL PICNIC

The annual picnic for the pupils of the Butler district schools will be held at Rock Springs park on Thursday, June 23. The picnic was orginally scheduled for Tuesday, May 24, but inability of school officials to have the steamer George Washington make the trip on that date caused its postponement. Officials of the steamer have assured school officials that the boat would make the excursion trip to Chester on June 23. The boat will leave the Weirton steel river docks at 9 o'clock in the morning and make the return trip at 7 o'clock in the evening.

CHAMBERLIN OFF TO BERLIN

Today

Hypatia and Mary Bartelme.
Prosperity Only Starting.
Death House Chat.
10,000 to 1, You're Safe.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

[The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune.]

STUDENTS at Oxford worry because women are to teach there. "Isis," read by the Oxford young gentleman, says that will eventually lead to a sex war, and is "a social revolution of the utmost significance."

Women are natural teachers; teaching has been their business from the beginning; teaching children, teaching husbands.

Hypatia, a better mathematician and philosopher than her father, Theon, was one of the greatest teachers that ever lived, until fanatical early Christian monks tore her from her chariot, as she was going to her school, and murdered her, more than 1,500 years ago.

WOMEN make good teachers and excellent judges, as shown by Judge Mary Bartelme in Chicago. All Chicago admires the administration of justice in her court, especially her wise, just, womanly handling of cases affecting wayward girls and women, and all juvenile cases.

The college boy or adult citizen lacking respect for women or confidence in their power, judgment and goodness, pays a poor compliment to his own mother.

THE stock market was busy yesterday in a 2,798,435-share session, and wound up as usual with the professional bear sitting on the dunce's stool. General Motors sold above 201, enthusiasts buying more than 148,000 shares of it.

"NEW Steel," 40 shares given to every holder of 100 old shares, began its Wall Street career selling at 125. Thus the Steel "melon" of $200,000,000 turns out to be worth $250,000,000 today.

Selling things in the United States "short" is a little dangerous.

SETBACKS may come, but remember that we haven't started yet on the road to prosperity. A field depends for fertility on water and fertilizer, a nation on wages and spending power. Labor once got $1. It now gets $5. But don't gamble, you will lose if you do.

UNDER certain circumstances it is hard to know what to say. Mr. Henry Judd Gray, in the death house because he helped Mrs. Snyder to murder the latter's husband, is visited by his wife, who said "How are you?" The ordinary American answer would be "fine and dandy." But you can hardly use that answer in the death house.

Those interested in the "ask me another" pursuit might think up answers for a husband whose wife asks "how are you?" as he sits in the death house.

WE KILL each other less frequently than we did. In 1925 murders amounts to 11 per 100,000 population. In 1926 the United States murder av-

Review-Tribune Offers a Booklet About Mexico

Why not be well informed about Mexico, one of the great questions of the day. Why not be able to state accurate facts instead of idle theories when Mexico is discussed? Why not be able to understand the news dispatches from Mexico?

Our Washington Information Bureau has prepared a plain, fact booklet about the republic to the south of us, giving a brief history of Mexico, and setting forth facts about the population, states, areas, railroads, mineral wealth, American interests, form of government, and other basic conditions of Mexico.

Every up-to-date American ought to know at least as much about Mexico as this booklet tells. Very few know one-tenth of it. Your copy may be secured through using the coupon below.

Daring Trans-Ocean Airman Salutes Crowd As Cruiser Starts Trip

"Chamberlin Will Make it," Predicts U. S. Hero of Skies

CHERBOURG, June 4.—"He'll make it."

This was the prediction of Captain Charles A. Lindbergh when informed by the International News service this afternoon that Clarence Chamberlin had started on a trans-ocean hop.

"He has a good plane and he'll make it," said Lindbergh.

Serenading Band on Launch Makes Gallant Effort Against Rolling of Sea to Produce Music

RYAN AIRCRAFT HEAD IS ABOARD

Aviator Will Spend Most of Voyage in Writing Book Upon Flight Across Atlantic.

CHERBOURG, June 4.—Two weeks after he swooped down from the skies to French soil and world fame, Captain Charles A. Lindbergh, first continent-to-continent flier, headed homeward today.

While thousands cheered the intrepid flier, he stepped off of French soil at 3:25 this afternoon and boarded a tender which transferred him to a launch from the U. S. S. Memphis.

Stands on Deck of Tender.

Lindbergh stood on the flag bedecked tender and waved and saluted to the crowds he left behind him.

Half a dozen launches steamed about the Memphis as she weighed anchor, one launch carrying a serenading band which made a gallant effort against the rolling of the sea to produce patriotic airs.

B. F. Mahoney, president of the Ryan Aircraft corporation, was given permission to sail with Lindbergh on the Memphis, just prior to the ship setting sail.

Captain Lindbergh will spend most of his voyage across the Atlantic in seclusion writing a book upon his flight across the ocean.

Band Plays "Stars and Stripes."

As the "Captain's Gig" from the Memphis came alongside the tender, Lindbergh bade farewell to his French friends and jumped into the tiny American boat which immediately headed for the Memphis, with flags aflutter and the cheers from the shore still audible. The band played "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

Lindbergh was asked by a boatswain where his baggage was and he produced one wooden box. He left

IRONDALE MAN BADLY BURNED IN MINE BLAST

Earl Williams, 34, Brought to City Hospital.

CONDITION GRAVE

Premature Explosion of Powder in Shaft Near Hammondsville.

Earl Williams, 34, Irondale miner, was perhaps fatally burned in a premature explosion of gun powder while preparing a charge in a small coal mine on Big Creek, about one-half mile west of Hammondsville, at 10 o'clock this morning.

He was brought to the City hospital where he was attended by Dr. E. P. Neitz, of Irondale. He was badly burned about the face and may be blind should he recover.

Williams was working alone in the mine when the explosion occurred. He made his way to the mine opening where his cries brought help from a nearby house.

The victim was taken to the office of Dr. Neitz and later removed to the hospital in an automobile.

STREET CARS HIT BY RAIN STORMS

Street car schedules between East Liverpool and Wellsville were twice interrupted today by the heavy rains which flooded the right of way to a depth of about 15 inches near Seventeenth and Commerce streets, Wellsville.

The first break occurred at 8 o'clock this morning. Another tie-up of nearly an hour resulted at 12:30 o'clock, this afternoon.

Washouts in the hillside sections were also reported as a result of the noon rain but damage was slight. There was but one interruption in electric light service.

No damage by the rain was reported by the telephone company.

BELLANCA PLANE AND DARING PILOT

The Bellanca plane "Columbia," with Clarence D. Chamberlain, pilot, who was accompanied by Charles A. Levine, millionaire head of the Columbia Aircraft corporation, hopped off today for Europe. Presumably the Bellanca plane will attempt to reach Berlin. Inset shows Lloyd W. Bertaud, who resigned as navigator of the craft.

JOHN CHECKLER SUFFOCATED IN SUB-BASEMENT

Samuel Vendzin, 34, Badly Gassed, Rescued.

STILL IS FOUND

Tragedy Occurs in Third Street Building, Wellsville.

John Checkler, 45, known as "Big John," is dead, while Samuel Vendzin, 34, is in a serious condition in the City hospital, as a result of being overcome by gas fumes in a sub-cellar under Checkler's grocery store and home in Third street, Wellsville, at 11:30 o'clock this morning.

Police, who seized a 30-gallon still, one 10-gallon keg of liquor, four barrels of mash and two empty kegs, and also found a gas burner in the basement, expressed the opinion that the tragedy occurred while the two men were attempting to operate the equipment.

Checkler died a few minutes after his son, James, who had tied a rope around the 250-pound form of his father, and others had pulled the man through the 19-inch trap door over the sub-cellar from which deadly fumes were pouring forth.

Previously, Vendzin had been taken from the death hole by the Checkler youth, but the son was unable to rescue his father because of the latter's weight.

Screams of relatives of Checkler, who were alarmed by the discovery made by the son, prompted neighbors to call police and firemen, and later a pulmotor was rushed from the East Liverpool fire department. Efforts of physicians and use of the pulmotor failed to resuscitate the elder Checkler who was gasping as he was taken from the sub-cellar.

Vendzin was taken to the East Liverpool hospital, where his condition was reported grave at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Checkler leaves a widow and eight children.

MAYOR CALLS FOR ANOTHER PAY ORDINANCE

Urges $1,800 as he Permits Slash to Become Law.

HITS ARGUMENTS

Cites Other Cities' Action and Condemns "False Economy."

Branding the $1,200 pay ordinance which he permitted to become a law without his signature last night, "false economy," Mayor Ralph C. Benedum today called upon council to enact "legislation restoring the salary to its former figure." The present compensation, which will be cut on January 1, 1928, is $1,800 a year.

The mayor cities the salaries paid mayors in other Ohio cities, some of which have municipal courts, which, it is claimed, relieves the mayor of much work. He also points to his 1926 record of license collection and enforcement of the building permit ordinance, which, he declared, added more than half a million dollars to the city's tax duplicate.

Message To Council.

His message to council reads, in part, as follows:

"It is my personal opinion that this ordinance is wrong and it is a false economy. However, in view of the fact that I am the present mayor and

YANKEE PILOT OF BELLANCA PLANE BEGINS OCEAN FLIGHT

Charles Levine, Millionaire Builder of Columbia Aboard.

FLIER CHEERED

Starts From Runway That Lindbergh Left Fortnight Ago.

HALIFAX, N. S., June 4.—A monoplane, believed to be the Bellanca flown by Clarence Chamberlin, was reported as being sighted over the Bay of Fundy off Yarmouth, N. S., at noon, standard time, today.

500 Miles From New York.

The reports reecived here did not state definitely the position of the mon plane, but it is believed it was opposite Yarmouth about 500 miles by direct airline from New York. Taking into account the time differences at Halifax it is estimated that Chamberlin had been in the air something over five hours when the monoplane was sighted.

The flight from Yarmouth to the open sea is still some 700 miles by direct airline and it is probable that Chamberlin will not head out over the ocean until around 7:30 o'clock tonight.

Y., June 4.—Another non-stop trans-Atlantic airplane flight got under way today when Clarence D .Chamberlin, piloting the great Bellanca monoplane, Columbia, hopped off for Europe shortly after 6 o'clock (Eastern daylight time) from the same runway that Charles A. Lindbergh left on his historic flight a fortnight ago.

No Announcement of Goal.

Carl Chory, secretary of the American Aeronoutical association, gave

TRANS-ATLANTIC NON-STOP FLIERS SWING OUT TO SEA OFF CAPE COD TWO HOURS AFTER THEIR NEW YORK JUMP-OFF

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., June 4.—The Bellanca Monoplane Columbia, carrying Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine on a trans-Atlantic non-stop flight swung out to sea off the tip of the long arm of Cape Cod at 8:45 a. m. today (Eastern daylight time).

The plane, which had been previously reported at Dartmouth and New Bedford, on the mainland, was identified by coast guardsmen of the Wood End station, near here. The Coast Guardsmen stated they observed the numerals "140" distinctly on the side of the big plane as it passed out to sea flying high in the sunlight.

Apparently Chamberlin and Levine on their flight were following virtually the same course as that taken by Charles Lindbergh on his memorable New York to Paris hop. The Columbia, however, unlike the "Spirit of St. Louis" with Lindbergh, was favored with perfect weather. When Lindbergh swept up the New England coastline for his turn at Newfoundland, he passed through great banks of fog. Today the sun was shining, visibility was many miles, and flying conditions generally were ideal.

Ships Asked To Aid.

NEW YORK, June 4.—"Altogether favorable" weather conditions face Clarence D. Chamberlin for at least the first half of his non-stop trans-Atlantic flight, the weather bureau announced today.

ST. JOHNS, Newfoundland, June 4.—Weather conditions were perfect today along the north Atlantic coast for Clarence Chamberlin's non-stop attempt from New York to Europe. A smart breeze was blowing out of the northwest, ready to aid the Bellanca monoplane on its eastward hop from here to Ireland, and a brilliant sun was shining. The weather was far different from the foggy atmosphere through which Charles Lindbergh was forced to fly.

WASHINGTON, June 4. — A wireless message to all shipping in the Atlantic was broadcast by the bureau of naval operations this morning, apprising mariners of the Chamberlin-Levine flight to Europe and asking aid and co-operation for the fliers.

The shipping board today sent radio message to all its ships in the north Atlantic to watch for Chamberlin and report by wireless any pertinent information regarding the flight.

Bad Weather Forecast.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Clarence Chamberlin may buck into bad weather tonight on his trans-Atlantic flight, the weather bureau said today.

During the day he will have favorable southeast winds but tonight the winds become strong and shift to the south, with the weather overcast. Rain was predicted for tonight and Sunda... fog off the coast tonight.

The coast guard cutter Tampa is on ice patrol 400 miles east of Cape Race, and Billiard radioed the ship to keep a close lookout for the Bellanca.

Weather conditions off Newfoundland are good, according to advices to the coast guard, but there are indications of today and stormy weather farther on.

ALLISON DEMANDS "BUSINESS" MEET OF ASSEMBLY

DELEGATE HITS TAX SYSTEM IN WEST VIRGINIA

Chester Man Goes to Charleston for Monday Session.

Hancock County Member Condemns "Politics" in Legislature.

Before leaving for Charleston today to attend the extraordinary session of the state legislature, which convenes on Monday, Delegate O. O. Allison, of Chester, in an interview, declared West Virginia needs a "business" assembly, not a "political" one, and assailed the state's tax system.

"The question, said Allison, now is: Who are the people?

Back at home the people hear or know little about the uses and abuses of temporary power. The people of our state elect 30 senators and 94 members of the house of delegates, or a total of 124 representatives, to manage the affairs of more than a million six hundred thousand of people. In other words, every 12,903 persons in the state have one representative making history, formulating policies, doing what the people want done. But, that percentage is cut down to where 48 votes in the house or 16 in the senate can say "stop." Therefore, in the house there is one voice for every 33,334 people, while in the senate every 100,000 people have one representative at the "stop" crossing.

"At the time we recessed at Charleston, those who controlled the senate were not doing team work with our chief executive. I shall not at this time undertake to fix fault. The governor has called us in extraordinary session, and in an energetic message has put up certain questions to the two bodies for action. It is my sincere hope that each member will lay aside all personal grievances, politics and selfish motives, keeping in mind only the welfare of all the people of our state.

"What West Virginia needs is a "business" legislature, instead of a "political" legislature, which truly means the science of government, for the protection and advancement of the people. But West Virginia will never come into her own so long as the present, miserable tax system prevails."

ROSALIE SWITZER, AGED 10, DIES

Rosalie Switzer, 10 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Switzer, Florida avenue, died yesterday in the Chester Emergency hospital, after an illness of two weeks.

The girl who attended the Sacred Heart parochial school, is survived besides her parents, by two brothers and four sisters: Joseph, George, Mary Louise, Frances, Agnes and Martha.

Funeral services will be held at 9 o'clock Monday morning in the Sacred Heart Catholic church, in charge of Rev. W. J. Sauer. Burial will be made in Locust Hill cemetery.

CAPITOL PLANS TO LEGISLATURE

With information acquired from yesterday's session of the Capitol building commission, Governor Gore will submit complete details of his plans to erect the main section of the capitol to the Legislature when the extraordinary session reconvenes Monday.

The entire proposal for completion of the main building and suggestions for raising the revenue were gone into thoroughly at the meeting, attended by Kanawha county members of the legislature as well as commission members.

Following an open meeting, an executive session was held and the matters continued to be discussed in a manner similar to the morning meeting.

No definite plans were announced, since it will be the province of the governor to submit details as requested by a resolution passed by the lower branch of the legislature.

The governor indicated that the plans would be submitted at the proper time, saying he would continue to consider the suggestions and furnish the required information to the legislature.

(Lindbergh's mother told Miss Bonita Witt, the writer, that her son did not want to worry her by letting her know of his thrills at aviation school. Miss Witt, therefore, went to a class-mate of "the Swede" to learn first-hand of those thrills.)

VIII.

Call it luck, fate or what you will, the same guiding spirit that watched over Charles A. Lindbergh as he winged his way across the solitary expanse of the Atlantic on his non-stop flight from New York to Paris, smiled on the flying cadets with which he was graduated from Brooks-Kelly government aviation school, San Antonio, Tex., in 1925. His was the first class to be graduated from that institution without losing one of its members by death. Several of the boys crashed and were slightly injured but no one was killed.

Of the 18 graduates, 17 are living today. Lieut. Maurice Gathercoal was drowned in the summer of 1925 while flying across Lake Michigan.

Five of the men are commissioned army aviators in the Philippines, one is a captain in the Peruvian army, another is in the Department of Agriculture service at Tallulah, La.

All of them have been successful in their respective fields of flying and they're waiting for their old-time classmate, "the big Swede," to return to the United States to "throw a party" for him that they believe will give him a much bigger "kick" than any feting by the crowned heads of Europe.

What Classmates Say.

"This popularity and attention won't spoil 'Swede,' they say. "He'll be just the same unspoiled kid when he returns."

Lindbergh had one crash just before his graduation, that almost proved fatal.

Capt. Eugene Stevens, one of the four students assigned to advanced pursuit flying in Lindbergh's class at Brooks-Kelly, tells of "Slim's" narrowest escape from death.

"Twelve planes were in the air," he recalls, "flying in three-ship formation, all of us chasing Lieut. Russell Maugham, who later became famous as the original 'dawn-to-dusk' flyer across the continent. As the enemy, he was supposed to fly below us. When the leader of the pursuit squadron gave the signal we would tear down toward him, motors racing, at a terrific speed. Then, just before we reached him, we'd 'zoom' or start a sharp climb to avoid hitting his plane. Since we were going at such a terrific pace we'd climb with considerable swiftness.

Then—Disaster!

"At an elevation of 4,000 feet Lindburgh and Lieut. C. D. MacCallister crashed into each other as they dived for Maughham's plane. They crashed with such force that they locked and climbed for several hundred feet before they fell. Bits of fusillage, struts and canvass floated slowly to the ground, then the planes crashed earhward. The first I knew of the accident was when I saw the planes dash to the ground and burst into flames. That's when an aviator gets scared—when he believes one of his friends is dying on a flaming plane.

"Maybe I didn't feel happy when I saw Lindbergh and MacAllister appear out of a cloud with their parachutes.

"While the two pilots picked themselves up from a ploughed field the other cadets in their planes played about the bonfire.

"Death didn't interest us much. Of course none of us wanted to die, but we didn't sit down and worry about crashing. When we learned the two men were safe, we forgot that Death had been hovering over the squadron a few minutes before."

Perhaps this glimpse of the philosophy of a flying cadet explains Lindbergh's apparent indifference to death or danger when he was waiting for favorable weather conditions for his Paris flight. The tragic fate of Nungessor and Coli did not appear to disturb him—he deeply regretted their loss, but the thought never occurred to him that the same fate might overtake him. He had made up his mind to fly to Paris and all else was subservient to that one alluring goal.

AN INTERESTING STUDY OF LINDBERGH

ARMY AND NAVY PLANES WILL GREET FLIER

Washington Prepares For Brilliant Escort for Lindbergh.

DIRIGIBLE ON JOB

Penn Avenue Will be Decorated as on Inaugural Day.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Capt. Charles Lindbergh will steam up the historic Potomac river with one of the most brilliant escorts ever furnished an American, to receive probably the most imposing reception ever accorded a private citizen in Washington.

The giant dirigible Los Angeles, scores of army and navy airplanes and hundreds of river craft will travel in the wake of the cruiser Memphis, it was indicated today.

The tortuous river route will carry him from the scene of many famous fleet reviews off the Virginia capes through the favorite cruising ground of presidents and past beautiful Mount Vernon, the ancestral seat of George Washington.

Will Occupy Admiral's Suite.

During the long voyage across the Atlantic Capt. Lindbergh probably will occupy an admiral's suite, it was said by navy officials. The cruiser Memphis, because it is the flagship of the European squadron, has specially fitted quarters for Admiral Burrage, who will not make the trip.

A fast trip but no guarantee against sea sickness was promised by naval officials. The Memphis, one of the navy's most modern 7,500-ton cruisers, can speed across the Atlantic at 33 knots an hour in comparative comfort for a hardened ocean voyager but with some danger of initial sickness for non-sailors.

Mother to be Invited.

Commissioners of the district, collaborating with four members of the cabinet, were busy today under the chairmanship of John Hays Hammond, noted engineer and philanthropist, in arranging the details of Lindbergh's welcome.

Historic Pennsylvania avenue will be decorated as on inaugural day, and lined with troops.

An invitation was to go forward today to Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh to come to Washington as a guest of Mrs. Coolidge at the temporary White House.

Brides Demand Battle Rite.

Brides of Abchasia, a district of the Caucauses, demand that the ancient custom of the bridegroom's battle for his fair one be continued. Few will accept a suitor who does not intend to carry them off by force. The custom is that on the wedding day the bride withdraws to the darkest room in her home. At dusk the bridegroom, supported by a bodyguard of friends, all armed to the teeth, rides to the house and engages in a mock dagger battle with the bride's relatives. Victorious he finds the bride and carries her away on his horse. Her relatives give chase, and when the bridegroom's house is reached, all join in a contest to see who can drink the most wine.

Sleeping accommodations are open to only first-class passengers in Europe.

The cost of living is falling in England.

Strange Beast Terrorizes.

A mysterious beast that walks on its hind legs is terrorizing natives in the Kenya Colony of India. It has killed a number of blacks, and the "Nandi bear," as they call it, is inspiring more fear than a lion. No white hunter has seen it, but Kanya's acting game warden, who examined the tracks, agrees that it walks on its hind legs. It has been described as being a strange species of lion, or even gorilla, but natives believe it is a hitherto unknown member of the hyena family that climbs trees. One report is that it has cream-colored hair, long tapering feet, with huge claws, and long nose covered with hair to the tip. It is said to roam only at night.

Long-distance telephone lines are just being developed in Belgium.

Ian Keith Plays Lead in "What Eevery Girl Should Know."

"What Every Girl Should Know," the Warner Bros. production at the Strand theatre, Monday and Tuesday, is an original screen play directed by Charles F. Reisner. This is the same Reisner who directed Syd Chaplin in "The Better 'Ole," and who shared the honors of authorship with Bruce Bairnsfather. For years before this success, Mr. Reisner had been famous inside of the picture industry as the man responsible for the funny gags in the Charles Chaplin comedies.

"What Every Girl Should Know" has proved to be a Reisner triumph everywhere it has been shown. It promises thrills, heart-throbs, fun and tenderness.

The story deals with Mamie Sullivan, the little mother of two orphaned brothers. The big brother, Dave, driving a truck, accidentally runs down and kills a woman. Through circumstantial evidence, he is convicted of manslaughter and sent to jail. Mamie and her kid brother are sent to an orphans' home. They escape and devote themselves to Dave's vindication.

Mamie is played by Patsy Ruth Miller, and Mickey McBan and Carrol Nye appear as her brothers. Mickey is the remarkable youngster who played the little boy in "Beau Geste," who got a bullet in his leg, and, in "The Return of Peter Grimm," the boy who gets into communication with old Peter.

The leading man is Ian Keith, whose work in "The Prince of Tempters" signalled him out for praise in lists devoted to the outstanding performances of the screen year.

Carmelita Geraghty, who, besides being a screen actress, is a well known amateur tennis player on the Pacific Coast, appears as a girl tennis champion, who meets her match in Mamie Sullivan, the kid from the playgrounds. Others in the cast are Lillian Langdon and Hazel Howell.

Miss Updegraff's Retirement

Announcement of the board of education yesterday of the retirement of Miss Florence Updegraff from the principalship and teaching staff of the East Liverpool high school, in the success of which she played an important part during her many years of splendid service, was received with regret on the part of the people of the community, for she had earned the love and respect of hundreds, yes thousands, of alumni as well as their parents and grand parents.

For nearly a half century, Miss Flo, as the head of the high school faculty was popularly known to the many students who have marveled at her vast store of knowledge as well as her efficiency, has directed an educational institution that ranks high in the state of Ohio.

Few educators, if any, can point to a record so brilliantly imprinted in the annals of time as Miss Updegraff's. She was equipped mentally for the all-important tasks that fell to her lot during 48 years of teaching. Endowed with a keen intellect, possessed of a rare personality combined with the tact of a diplomat, she served with distinction to herself and credit to the schools.

And, too, Miss Flo has molded the characters and shaped the careers of scores of East Liverpool sons and daughters who have chosen places in the business and professional world. And they owe no small part of their success to her counsel.

The retirement of Miss Updegraff is a great loss to the East Liverpool schools, and the board of education will search long and far before finding a man or woman who can capably and efficiently fill her place.

An Italian Kaiser

Mussolini at last has shown his hand. In a recent speech to the Italian Parliament, he revealed his plans for Italy. They are plans that the world should know—especially as his hearers applauded them with vast enthusiasm.

He proposes to "continue the task of governing the Italian people" for 10 or 15 years more, because it is his "precise duty." His task, as he sees it, is not only to build up Italian industry, in which he has made considerable progress, but to build up Italian population and to build a great, effective army.

He tells Italy, which now has about 42,000,000 people, that by 1950 it must have 60,000,000. What for? Cannon fodder, apparently, more than anything else.

"It is a fundamental duty to perfect our armed forces. We must be able at a certain time to mobilize 5,000,000 men." The moment Italy can do that, "we can make ourselves heard." There must also be a strong navy and a strong air force.

What can that mean but military conquest?

Mussolini, then, is dreaming the German Kaiser's dream. Italy, too, looks forward to her "Tag." And in the preparation for conquest, says the dictator, "we bury solemnly all the lies of universal democratic suffrage." For God and Kaiser there is the dream of a new Roman Empire, with the Duce as emperor.

Almost the identical dream that Wilhelm and his people dreamed. Have Mussolini and his charmed Italians learned nothing from the history of the last 13 years?

Eye Test For Children

Sone one has worked out a vision test system for young children, in which funny little animals take the place of letters of the alphabet. The system is being demonstrated at public health centers and schools. If it proves satisfactory, this Noah's Ark eye test undoubtedly will be widely used in examining the eyes of little children.

Saving human eyesight is an important field of health activity. Many youngsters are retarded in their mental and physical development because of vision defects which might be cured or corrected if discovered and taken care of promptly.

A great deal is being done in improving artificial lighting methods to safeguard vision in homes, schools, factories and offices. All that is of great importance, but is only part of the work to be done in protecting and strengthening human eyes. Along with it, testing the eyes themselves is necessary, and probably the best time is before the children start to school.

Roofed With Honey

In Gomshall, Eng., we are told, stands a farmhouse built in the 15th century. There is danger of its roof caving in, but not because of age. The roof is so full of honey that it has become too heavy for the supporting beams. That roof has been a gigantic beehive for 100 years. According to the present owner of the house, no one in all that time has tried to take out any of the honey because that would have required removing the roof.

Now roof or family must go. There is real danger in further delay. Moving out looks like the fairest proposition, because those bees really have more property in that house than the humans have. If the people left, perhaps the bees would put honey in the downstairs rooms, too.

Byron, or someone or other, woke up one morning to find himself famous. Capt. Lindbergh found himself famous because he didn't go to sleep.

If Lindbergh eats and drinks as little in Europe as he did on the way over, he'll survive the ordeal.

THE EVILS OF INTEMPERANCE

A certain newspaper proprietor in New York who always was—and still is, even in these prohibition days, a total abstainer—dropped into the office just before press time, and found the assistant managing editor in charge.

"Where's Blank?" he asked, naming the managing editor.

"Off on one of these periodical tears of his," answered the assistant

"Where's the city editor?"

"Pied—down in Andy Horn's."

"I didn't see the make-up editor as I came through the composing room. What's become of him?"

"He's in a Turkish bath over in Brooklyn getting a bun boiled out of him."

The proprietor dropped into a chair, shaking his head sadly.

"Well," he said, "for a person who never touches a drop I seem to suffer more from the effects of drunkenness than any other man in this town."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, June 4.—No professional calling is so provocative of sneers as that of the female impersonator. With exception of Julian Eltinge who is rich and has a Rialto theatre named for him, few have attained theatrical heights.

Yet the female impersonator is invariably a drawing card. Bert Savoy with his jovial hard boiled commonness packed theatres from coast to coast. He spawned slang that went around the world. One of the first female impersonators was Bill Artz, who now runs a dog shop on Sixth avenue.

The modern crop of female impersonators are college men who found their metier at college theatricals. They launched careers in what they considered at the time mere clowning. Many fathers who expected sons to sit at important desks lived to see them traipsing around in women's clothes.

As a rule the female impersonator is a pronounced masculine type. One peculiarly enough graduated to his calling from the driver's seat of a truck. Most of them are married, but they live pretty much alone. They are conscious of a certain stigma.

In his early days Julian Eltinge had to prove his masculinity by mighty wallops. He frequently waded through a semi-circle of jeers at back stage doors leaving several with moused eyes and dangling teeth. He was handy with his mitts.

A press agent devised a rousing publicity stunt for one impersonator. It was during the days of Jack Johnson's championship. The scheme was for the actor to go to the resort in Chicago over which Johnson presided and start a row.

The impersonator was to hit Johnson and depend on the burly escorts accompanying him for protection from serious damage. It was well staged and would have doubtless won first page prominence all over the land. But at the opportune moment the impersonator paled and slumped into a dead faint. It was Johnson who considerably revived him with a dash of cold water.

A film impresario recently sounded me as to the possibility of titling one of his products. I replied I didn't feel I possessed the necessary qualifications. He misunderstood my evasion and inquired: "How much intelligence do you assume it requires to title films?" I'd hate to tell him being the polite boy I am.

Not since "Diamond Jim" Brady was the porcine playboy of Broadway has there been a conspicuous "first nighter." Several have tried it—among them a tire salesman, a cafe keeper, a well known theatrical angel—but they simply couldn't make the grade. When Brady went down the aisle with perhaps a Dolly sister on each arm it was the event that caused a craning of necks. His imitators do not even receive a side glance.

Broadway fame requires consistent effort. Once in awhile some figure squirms up from the maggotry of sensational tabloidism to be a nine day wonder but usually they must do the same thing year in and year out to keep the focus. Fame must be worn like Oscar Hammerstein's silk hat or Brad's diamonds to hold the spot.

Sign in a midtown haberdashery window: "There is nothing high hat about us. Come in and loaf if you wish." In other words "just folksey."

Automats have been troubled recently by coffee thieves. A patron draws his coffee from the spigot, puts it on a table and returns for some article of food. When he reaches his table again his coffee has been consumed.

HASKINS' LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

STATE AND LOCAL TAXES.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 4. — Business men and others who believe that state and local taxes are too high should not be content merely to talk and complain about it as they talk and coplain about the weather. They should get busy and do something about it. They should initiate a movement to simplify, coordinate, standardize, and synchronize the tax systems of the various states. Through some organization they should undertake to formulate a suitable state and local tax plan, and then by means of an educational campaign endeaver to encourage and persuade its general adoption.

Such is the opinion of Mark Graves, who, as a member of the New York tax commission, can qualify as an expert on the subject and was asked to discuss it before the United States Chamber of Commerce. But while he concedes that reforms are needed, Mr. Graves does inot subscribe to the widely disseminated idea that the government tax bill of the country is unduly high and that waste and extravagance characterize the expenditure of state and local funds while the Federal government is conserving the people's resources.

We are told, he says, that the expenditures for all governmental purposes in the country are now around ten or eleven billion dollars yearly. This is the subject of much comment. Some believe that the vast expenditures are unwarranted, that they are due to waste and extravagance on the part of public officials, and that the burden of taxation is almost if not quite unbearable.

Mr. Graves' answer to this is somewhat akin to the famous retort of the late Joseph G. Cannon to the member of congress who was complaining about the constant increase in government appropriations and finally thew up his hands and wailed, "Why, at the rate we're going we'll soon be spending a billion dollar a year!"

"Hell, this is a billion-dollar country," answered Uncle Joe.

We Can Afford All It Costs.

"I doubt if things are as bad as they are represented," says Mr. Graves. 'We spend upwards of fourteen billion dollars annually in purchasing, maintaining and operating automobiles; two billions for cigars, cigarettes, and other tobacco products; one billion for beverages, exclusive of amounts paid bootleggers; one billion for entertainment; and then after paying taxes we find the wealth of the nation is increasing at the rate of twenty-five billion annually.

"I maintain that a people who can spend the amounts enumerated for the purposes named and still add to their combined wealth twenty-five billion dollars yearly can afford, without undue hardship, to pay ten billion—a little more or a little less—for all the benefits, advantages, and blessings of government."

Constant repetition of the statement that the gederal government is constantly increasing theirs, he continues, causes many to believe that state and local officials are spendthrifts while federal officials have the characteristics usually attributed to Scotchmen. A fair, impartial study of the facts does not warrant this assumption. Such comparisons are made by selecting the peak of war taxes as the basis with which to compare taxes of the present, and Mr. Graves holds any such comparsion to be unfair.

If comparisons are to be made he maintains that a cycle from pre-war normal conditions to postwar normal conditions should be selected. The federal expenditures inculded debt serpenses chargeable against ordinary receipts in 1925 were 364 per cent higher than in 1915, while during the same period the expenditures of the states increased 173 per cent and those of cities having a population of 30,000 or more, 84 per cent. Of course the federal expenditures included debt service payments and others directly due to the war, but an analysis shows that the payments for the usual expenses of the federal government common to every year's business are climbing, not [illegible].

This expert cites the reasons why the costs of government have increased so noticeably in the past decade, the first being that the dollar does not purchase as much as it did in pre-war times. That alone accounts for 50 per cent of the increase.

Education and Automobiles.

Education and automobiles, he finds, are responsible for a large part of the increase in governmental expenditures.

"In 1915," he says, 'the states and their municipal subdivisions expended for public education, in round figures, $330,000,000. In 1925, similar expenditures exceeded $950,000,000, an increase of nearly 200 per cent. If spending less means less education, few would favor reducing taxes by curtailing this item.

'The third principal cause for increase in state and local expenditures is the motor vehicle. That modern invention has necessitated more and better highways. Enormous sums are being spent annually by the states and their localities in constructing and maintaining improved roads. Moreover, the automobile has made it possible to extend and develop the suburbs of cities and that has required more streets, more street lighting, and, finally, the cities have been forced greatly to enlarge their appropriations for traffic control, including both traffic signal systems and traffic officers."

The fourth specific cause for the growing cost of government is that the population is increasing, and in addition the people are demanding more and better governmental service as the nation grows in wealth.

In the matter of tax reform, Mr. Graves does not suggest that each

WELLSVILLE MEN ARE ACQUITTED OF EMBEZZLEMENT

"Not Guilty" Verdict Returned in Lisbon Court.

NINE-DAY TRIAL

Two Tons of Scrap Used as Exhibits by Attorneys.

George and John Shultz, and Abraham Katz, all of Wellsville, indicted on charges of embezzlement and receiving and concealing stolen property of the Pennsylvania Railroad company, were acquitted last night by a jury in common pleas court, Lisbon.

The "not guilty" verdict was returned at midnight, the jury being given the case at 8:38 p. m.

It is reported six ballots were taken, the first two standing 8 to 4 for acquittal, the next three being 9 to 3 for acquittal and the final ballot being unanimous.

A pile of scrap brass was brought into the court room, all pieces being grease-covered, and as a result the carpet in the court room has been ruined. During the trial many of pieces of scrap brass were tagged as exhibits, but there were others that were not tagged. Weight of the brass totaled approximately two tons.

The case was tried before Judge W. M. Whitcraft. Prosecuting Attorney Robert M. Brookes and his assistant, John E. Bauknecht, represented the state, while counsel for the defendants were George E. Davidson, of East Liverpool, and W. A. O'Grady, of Wellsville.

City of Athletics Planned.

"Athletics for everybody," is the slogan of the public recreation department of Manila in its campaign to have everyone in the city take part in the summer vacation program that has been outlined. Not only will all playgrounds be kept busy, but many events will be held outside. Bankers, messenger boys, clerks, students, bootblacks and newsboys and others have been invited to take part, and no entrance fees will be charged. Volleyball, basket, playground ball, and playground instructors are organizing field and track teams to be entered in a city athletic league. Silvester Torress, playground instructor, expects to have most of the men, at least, of the city actively interested in the campaign for better health.

DB SENIOR DEPENDABLE

ANNOUNCING
The Senior Line

A REMARKABLE NEW SIX
by DODGE BROTHERS

A new line of Sixes by Dodge Brothers is presented to the public today.

It has been rumored, and hoped, for years that Dodge Brothers would ultimately produce such a line—more refined and, of course, higher in cost than their present car.

To combine the sturdy worth of Dodge Brothers standard product with those refinements which greater cost permits, could not fail, it was conceded, to produce a motor car of unique distinction and fineness.

The Senior Line is Dodge Brothers answer to this demand—and Dodge Brothers have answered well.

These are remarkable cars. Brilliantly vital and alive—surprisingly quiet—impressively smart. And built, like all Dodge Brothers motor cars, for years of dependable service.

See one and drive it and you will marvel that performance of this quality and character could be provided at a price so low.

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE.

Tenderly, as he finished attaching the last piece of tape, he lowered his head and touched his lips to the gleaming skin, near the wound, then dropped to meet the upsweep of her arms, to meet the hot, vivid contact of her soft, scarlet lips.

A noise in the passageway aroused them and he straightened swiftly, drawing back into place the protecting folds of the girl's burnouse, and shifting the cushions beneath her head that they might be more comfortable for her. Then, he turned to find Bou Hamara's eyes on him, but there was no suspicion in their depths; only solicitude.

"The wound," he said. "Is it better?"

"Healing nicely," Larry answered

"Tenderly, he lowered his head and touched the lips to the gleaming skin."

aware that the flood of crimson was ebbing from Benna's face, that her eyes were soft and star-like and dreamy. "The three days you have promised us will see Allal Abdi ready to travel again."

"It is well," said the other, and replaced the food. "As I told you, there is little enough time to spare. If you fulfill all that is expected of you, you will do well to be ready for the action that will come with the anniversary of the phophet's birth."

"Bou Hamara," said Larry calmly, dipping into his couscous, noting the Bena, too, eating hungrily, "if I knew where I am going and what I shall find there, aside from the Eye, I could hasten my actions."

"Who am I to tell you? Truly, Youssef el-Habbassi, you are a wizard and you should know more of the future than I who, at best, am a shop keeper or soldier, as occasion demands."

"You spoke of the people growing restless. Tell me, has Omar ben Medjad heard of this restlessness?"

"I think he has, for all Islam is rapidly becoming aware of it. Even the Spanish, in far off Ab Dukkar must, by now, have heard a breath of what it means."

"It is, then—?" breathed Larry, leaning forward and forgetting his meal.

"It is a plan conjured by the Marabout Group for the Seven Tribes of the Berbers and their allies to the south, east and west to unite in a concerted movement against the power of Spain in Morocco; a move for the tribes to sweep out of the hills like a blight and scatter the Spaniards and the Partisans and the Submissive Tribes and the nasrani to the four winds. If successful, it will be the greatest massacre Morrocco has ever known. The move is inspired, no doubt, by reason of the successful warfare of the Riff tribes against the Spaniards.

Stunned, Larry sat silent, visioning the terrible calamity this would be to humanity. He could see in his mind's eye the hill hordes coming out of their mountain strongholds, armed to the teeth, charging in overwheling numbers on the weakly-manned settlements; could see the tidal wave of blood which would follow in the wake of this sweep of the tribes. He shuddered, then bowed under the enormity of the task he could now see was resting on his own shoulders. After a time he looked up.

"Bou Hamara, I have suspected this for a long time, but only now have I heard said that which was in my thoughts. Tell me this: If I recover the Sacred Eye and place it in the hands of Omar ben Medjad, how will it stave off this terrible thing?"

Bou Hamara considered a moment, fingering his coffee cup and drawing deeply on his cigaret.

"I thought you realized, Youssef el-Habassi, that Omar ben Medjad is fighting as much for Spain as he is to set Allal Abdi in power. The Eye in his possession, it is in his mind to place the youth on the tribal throne and himself holding the Eye, guarded and secreted, give his own guarantee for the safety of Allal once the latter is sherif. With Allal ruling, friendship with Spain, and France, too, would be reaffirmed, conflict would cease and the mountain passes would no longer run red with the blood of brave men. An era of peace and good will would sweep the Berber country and the Marabout Group, of a necessity, would be dissolved and its members become what they used to be, wandering holy men, ministering religious wants of all the people."

Larry breathed deeply. He could see that it was necessary for the Eye to be recovered from the Marabout Group in order that the Group's diabolical schemings against the Spanish might be checkmated. But out of it all he visioned chiefly one fact that spurred him on in this momentous endeavor, this battling with wit and muscle against almost superhuman odds—and that was the restoration to rightful power of Benna Selham Allalabdi, the ruler of the Berbers.

"Having told me so much, Bou Hamara, tell me, too, where I shall find the Temple of Doom, and how I shall enter it after I have found it?" He looked at Bou Hamara expectantly, but the shop-keeper shook his head.

"Am I Allah, that I know all things?" he asked. "Would that I could answer you, but it is only in my mind that you must continue south, along the Forbidden Road; it is only in my mind that that which is past will prove to have been child's play compared with that which the future holds for you."

"You hold forth cheerful prospects, Bou Hamara. Tell me, do you know where Omar ben Medjad is now?"

The other drooped his head.

"No man may say. He is somewhere along the road, mayhap ahead of you, making ready the way as best he may for your coming wizard; but where he stops and with whom he speaks, Allah alone may tell."

"He left no word for me?"

"Word of a sort," answered the shopkeeper, fingering his dirty beard. "He said there would be one at the Gate of the Burning who would be watching for you, seeking to aid you. Too, he said that you would see the Eye, but were not to fear it; that if you heard the Voice, you were to use your wit, and that if called on to meet the Ordeal, you were to meet it as occasion told you was best. He said you probably would pass through the Gate of the Daggers and that you should pass through fearlessly. Now, I must leave you. If, at the end of three days, you have not seen me again, go quietly through a passageway I shall show you. It will bring you to the jungle beyond the edge of the karia, and from there you must push on, straight south. Take what food you may desire from the meager stores you will find there."

The Most Beautiful Chevrolet in Chevrolet History

In thousands of average American homes there are now two automobiles—"a car for her, too," so there may be transportation for the family while "he" drives away to work.

And "her" car has such an infinite degree of usefulness! Downtown shopping, taking the children to school, afternoon calls, meeting trains—and the many additional trips that must be made to and from the house as a part of every day's routine. No other car is so admirably suited to a woman's needs as the Most Beautiful Chevrolet.

With striking new bodies by Fisher, and finished in pleasing colors of lustrous, lasting Duco, it provides in abundant measure the comfort, charm and elegance women admire in a motor car. It is easy to start because of its Delco-Remy electric starting system—famous the world over for its dependability and excellence. It is easy to stop because of powerful oversize brakes. And it is easy to drive and park because a modern three-speed transmission, smooth-acting disc clutch, and a semi-reversible steering gear that gives finger-tip steering.

And women find in Chevrolet a remarkably comfortable car. Long semi-elliptic springs extend over 88% of the wheelbase—providing easy riding over any road. The large, deeply cushioned seats are set at the most comfortable angle. Ternstedt window regulators and remote control door handles are further fine car conveniences that women admire and appreciate.

The remarkable economy of Chevrolet ownership is another vital reason for Chevrolet's wide and increasing popularity among women. Extremely low first cost, exceptionally high fuel and oil mileage and the very minimum of upkeep expense—all combine to make Chevrolet a car of outstanding economy.

CAPT. LINDBERGH WILL "GO ON AIR" NEXT SATURDAY

HERO OF SKIES WILL BE HEARD BY RADIO FANS

Elaborate Hook-up to Carry Washington Ceremonies.

PRESIDENT BUSY

Flier Will Accompany Nation's Chieftain to Church.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Charles A. Lindbergh will "go on the air" as soon as he lands in the national capital next Saturday, it was indicated today.

An elaborate hook-up is being arranged to carry the ceremonies which will take place in the shadow of the Washington monument soon after the scout Cruiser Memphis docks. The lone eagle of the air also will be asked to make his bow before the microphone again at the reception of the Minnesota state society.

With a committee of cabinet officers and another composed of leading citizens of the capital steadily adding to the program, President Coolidge assumed the role of general chairman of the festivities.

State Dinner Planned.

But one quiet day of the three he will spend in Washington is planned for Capt. Lindbergh. He will have the opportunity on Sunday of accompanying the president and Mrs. Coolidge to church, with Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, his mother, as the fourth member of the party. On that day he also will place a wreath upon the tomb of the unknown soldier at Arlington and then visit disabled soldiers at Walter Reed hospital.

Perhaps the greatest official recognition paid the young flying ace will be a state dinner tendered at the temporary White House on the night of his arrival. The function is expected to be one of the most brilliant of the season, with the cabinet family, the highest officers of the army and navy and congressional leaders present..

Famous Fliers to Greet Lindy.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The army's most famous fliers were given permission today by the war department to fly to Washington to take part in the reception for Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh next Saturday.

Sister Ship Christened.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., June 4.—A sister ship of the monoplane which Captain Charlie L. Lindbergh flew from New York to Paris, will be christened "pride of San Diego" this afternoon and take off tomorrow morning for Washington, D. C., to greet the trans-Atlantic ace upon his arrival there.

Lindy Sails for Home

France traveling light, as he had come.

Lindbergh was piped over the side. The strains of the boatswains' whistles came ashore like shrill peeping birds, and again the band on the piers blared forth "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

Harbor craft shrieked a farewell with whistles and sirens. Crowds waved fluttering handkerchiefs. Then the boyish figure disappeared on the deck of the Memphis—a great adventure in amateur diplomacy had been ended and an undying hero was headed homeward.

The homeward-bound pennant went fluttering to the masthead of the Memphis, her funnels began belching smoke and soon her nose was pointed towards America.

Sees Hop-off of French Airmen.

LE BOURGET FLYING FIELD, France, June 4.—Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh arrived at the military airdrome at 8:30 o'clock from the American embassy in Paris to see the hop-off of the French airmen costes and Rignot for Siberia.

400 Children Will Enroll in Bible School on Monday

More than 400 children, between the ages of 4 and 14 years, are expected to enroll in the Vacation Bible school, which will open in the Sixth street school at 8:15 o'clock Monday morning. The classes, which will meet daily excepting Saturday and Sunday, will dismiss at 11:15 a. m.

The school will be in charge of Miss Alma Taylor, Chester, director of religious education in the public schools, and a corps of experienced instructors.

Hugh Fitzpatrick, Aged 77, Dies in Hanoverton Home

Funeral services will be held at 20 o'clock Monday morning in St. Philips' Catholic church, Dungannon, in charge of Rev. T. T. Merchant. Burial will be made in Grove Hill cemetery, Hanoverton.

"I am Happy," Says Mother of Trans-ocean Flier

DENNISON, Iowa, June 4.—"I am happy that he has finally gotten away," Mrs. E. C. Chamberlin, mother of Clarence D. Chamberlin, who, with Charles A. Levine, today embarked on a non-stop trans-Atlantic flight, said today when informed that her son's flight was under way.

Chamberlin Hops Off

the official starting time at 6:05:37 (Eastern Daylight.)

Chamberlin was accompanied by Charles A. Levine, millionaire head of the Columbia Aircraft corporation, builders of the Columbia.

No official announcement was made as to the destination of the Bellanca plane—Columbia—but it was generally understood that Chamberlin would try to reach Berlin and go even farther if possible.

A copy of today's issue of the New York American was given to Chamberlin to deliver to the newspaper's correspondent in Berlin. The fact that Chamberlin said he would attempt to deliver it indicated that he had set Berlin as his goal.

2,000 See Take-off.

Two thousand persons, attracted to the field by reports that Chamberlin was about to start, saw the take-off. They broke into a cheer as the monoplane got away. The take-off was perfect, the runway being dry and not soggy as it was when Lindbergh started.

Chamberlin mode a false start at 6 o'clock but he taxied the Columbia back and within five minutes was off again on his proposed long flight.

"He's off!" the crowd cried as the Bellanca slid along the runway, lifted, then rose higher and higher as it charged into the east wind. It cleared the telegraph wires with a margin of seventy-five feet between the wires and the landing gear. Lindbergh's plane almost came to grief on these same wires.

The ship climbed steadily in the weak early morning sunlight which picked gold from its wings and struck sparks of silver from its fuselage.

Levine's Wife Collapses.

Levine's departure with Chamberlin was a surprise to everybody at the hangar and a distinct shock to his wife. All the assistance he will be able to give Chamberlin will be to hold "the stick" to steady the ship should Chamberlin have to release the control to attend to some other detail.

Mrs. Levine did not know her husband intended to make the perilous flight. She had been told that her husband was merely going to make a test flight. That was the reason, it was explained, why the false take off was purposely arranged. Mrs. Levine was on the field and saw both take-offs.

When she was told the second take-off was no test flight, she collapsed into the arms of a friend.

Mrs. Chamberlin Cries.

Mrs. Chamberlin did not come to the field to see her husband off. She said good-bye to him early today at the Garden City hotel.

He had been awakened at 3:30 a. m. He donned knickers and a wind-breaker, instead of the usual flying outfit, because the Columbia has an enclosed cabin.

Tears coursed down Mrs. Chamberlin's face as her husband kissed her. He started to leave and she began sobbing audibly. He turned back, put his arms around her, and whispered something that made her smile through her tears. Again he said good-bye—and quickly walked out.

Message for Lindbergh.

Chamberlin was driven to the field in an automobile, arriving at 4:55 a. m. He had the car run over the runway to test its firmness. He seemed pleased, for he smiled.

Newspaper photographers crowded around him as he emerged from the car and he consented to pose with Levine. They stood beside the Columbia, smiling and chatting, as the pictures were taken.

Richard Pears, camera man who piloted another plane in the wake of Chamberlin's, returned and reported:

"He headed right over Long Island, constantly changing altitude. He started off at 500 feet, then got up to 1,000 feet, down to 500 feet again.

"I followed him to the tip of Long Island sound. He got a good break there. The mist opened and lifted right in front of him and the waters were visable, clear and bright under us."

Before he stepped into the cockpit for the take-off, Chamberlin left a message to be given to Captain Lindbergh. It said:

"Sorry not to wait to greet you back, but I have a break in the weather so am off."

Weather Conditions Ideal.

Weather conditions locally were ideal when the fliers got away. The sky was clear and a dead calm prevailed. Weather conditions between here and Nova Scotia were almost equally as good, except for patches of fog off the shore.

Although the destination of the Columbia was merely given as "Europe," it was understood that Chamberlin and Levine planned to travel as far as the fuel in the monoplane would take them, it might get only as far as the British Isles, perhaps it would go as far as Berlin, or even Vienna or Budapest. The main aspiration was to get the plane across the Atlantic safely and then have it carry as far as possible.

Chamberlin in Good Humor.

Chamberlin was in good humor as he posed for pictures. He was perfectly at ease and joked with the policemen.

A few minutes before the take-off Levine was almost shoved outside the police lines by an officer who did not recognize him.

Chamberlin carried with him letters which he will distribute in Europe. They were marked "Via air mail from the United States." Most of them are from friends of Chamberlin to friends or relatives in Europe.

Chamberlin and Levine took along ten chicken sandwiches made with toasted rye bread. Three sandwiches were enough for Lindbergh. Two bottles of chicken soup, a bottle of coffee and a half dozen oranges also were put aboard.

Carried Load of 5,400 Pounds.

The monoplane carried 451 gallons of gasoline and 18 gallons of oil. It was estimated that the total load of the Columbia was about 5,400 pounds, or 200 pounds more than Lindbergh carried.

The "Paris" part of the "New York-Paris" sign on the Columbia was painted out. So was the name "Bellanca." The designer, Bellanca, engaged in a dispute with Levine last month which delayed departure.

The Bellanca is powered by a Wright whirlwind motor. The plane is 8 feet 9 inches in height and from rudder to engine it is 26 feet 9 inches. It has the Bellanca struts which, engineers say, strengthen the plane and increase its lift. The big wing of the monoplane is 46 feet 6 inches in length. Its width, 6 feet 7 inches, is slightly narrower than Lindbergh's wing.

LINDY FLIES AWAY AFTER PARIS GOODBYE

American Hops Off for Lessay Field Near Cherbourg.

THANKS FRENCH

Last Official Ceremony Held at City Hall in Port.

PARIS, June 4.—Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh hopped off for Lessay flying field, near Cherbourg, at 9:25 o'clock this morning.

Lindbergh taxied out upon the field at 9:23 o'clock with Sergeant Charpentier standing in the rear seat calling instructions into the American's ear.

The plane rose easily and gracefully. It circled the field once gaining in altitude as it did so. Three minutes later—at 9:28 o'clock—20 French military planes took off to escort the famous American on his way north.

Charpentier occupied a seat where there was an emplacement for a machine gun.

Just before the take-off Lindbergh shook hands with Myron T. Herrick, the American ambassador, saying:

"Goodbye and thank you."

Ambassador Herrick responded:

"I am going to America in the summer and I shall probably see you."

"I hope so," said Lindbergh.

No Fuss About Departure.

Lindbergh shook hands with and said farewell to Parmely Herrick, son of the ambassador; Major Young and a score or more of French pilots. The French surrounded the young American showering good luck wishes upon him.

"I have had a fine time in Europe and I am grateful for the many honors I have received," said Lindbergh in saying goodbye. "The people were more than friendly. I don't know how to thank them."

There were no official ceremonies attending Lindbergh's departure. He wanted to get away quietly and without fuss.

The exact time of his departure from Le Bourget was in doubt up to the last minute. He was not expected to travel upon schedule, knowing that the cruiser Memphis would wait for him even if he did not reach Cherbourg until nightfall.

The last official ceremony for the young American hero was held at Cherbourg. The mayor of Cherbourg and members of the municipal council had extended an invitation to Lindbergh to call at city hall to enable the officials to pay their respects and to say farewell in the name of France.

Following the ceremonies at the Cherbourg city hall there was an automobile procession to the Gare Maritime where the Chamber of Commerce had arranged a reception. Capt. Lindbergh dedicated a marble plague recently placed there in his honor.

Both Cherbourg and Lessay were decorated with French and American flags in honor of the young American. His farewell was to be in a blaze of friendly glory.

French airmen pointed out to Lindbergh that the landing field near Cherbourg might prove treacherous to a strange aviator and they counselled him to travel as a passenger upon another airplanes. But Lindbergh did not want to establish a precendent after flying his own plane—even if a borrowed one—wherever he went in Europe. He wanted his last flight to be like all the others—a solitary Lindbergh affair.

Takes Passenger With Him.

While Lindbergh refused to travel to the coast as a passenger he finally consented to take a pasenger with him.

Also, at the last moment, he decided to take a Breget two-seater instead of the Nieuport single seater that had been selected for him. The Breguet is a biplane, whereas Lindbergh has always been used to flying a monoplane, but it made no difference to him.

The passenger with Lindbergh was French Sergeant Charpentuer, who occupied the observer's seat in the rear of the pilot's seat, where the American sat.

Ambassador Myron T. Herrick was visibly touched over the departure of his young guest. Like every one else who met him Herrick had become attached to the modest, unassuming young middle westerner. By his gentlemany conduct, his simplicity and his unfailing good humor Lindbergh had won the hearts of all.

French officials, in saying goodbye, expressed the hope that Lindbergh would come again and he promised to do so.

U. S. Navy Goes On Dress Parade For Its Commander

ABOARD THE PRESIDENTIAL YACHT MAYFLOWER, OFF CAPE HENRY, VA., June 4.—The United States navy went on dress parade today for its commander-in-chief, President Calvin Coolidge.

Some three miles off the coast of Cape Henry, 98 fighting vessels, the bulk of America's combined Atlantic and Pacific fleets, steamed slowly past the presidential yacht Mayflower to the accompaniment of roaring salutes and the seemingly ceaseless strains of the national anthem, bringing home forcibly to the president the might of the nation's naval establishment.

It was the first time in history that the two great armadas patrolling the widely separated coastlines of the United States had ever assembled for a joint review and Mr. Coolidge was presented with a sight unique in the memory of naval men. For two hours, vessel after vessel, guns bristling and gleaming under a brilliant sun and a cloudless sky, cruised by the anchored Mayflower, rails manned with the fighting men of the fleet.

BERLIN AWAITS COLUMBIA; ROME MAY BE GOAL

Germany Aroused to High Pitch of Excitement.

KEEN INTEREST

Field Cleared; Hindenburg Fleet Will Render Assistance.

BERLIN, June 4.—Germany is aroused to a high pitch of excitement over the possibility of Clarence Camberlin piloting his Bellanca plane to Berlin, and everyone is displaying the keenest interest.

This morning President Hindenburg made inquiries as to whether Chamberlin had actually started. As soon as the president learned of Chamberlin's departure he gave instructions that all departments of the government do everything possible to co-operate and aid the American flier.

Although Germany has no military air-force to aid in receiving Chamberlin it is preparing to give him all of the facilities of the best equipped passenger air service in Europe.

Templehofer Field Cleared.

Orders have been issued that Templehofer Field be cleared to receive Chamberlin. Huge searchlights have been wheeled into position to facilitate night landing.

The ministry of marine has issued orders to the entire German fleet, including a squadron now off Portugal, to render all assistance to Chamberlin and to report the progress of his flight. As soon as definite news of the progress of the flight is received the ministry of marine plans to dispatch a chain of destroyers and torpedo boats into the North Sea to form a guiding line for Chamberlin.

During the morning hours Germany was swept with contradictory reports. For several hours the official German News agency insisted that Chamberlin had started yesterday and when announcement was flashed on electric bulletin boards that he had postponed the flight great groans went up. The crowds hung on, however, and when at noon the news was again flashed that Chamberlin was in the air there were great cheers.

The American embassy is making plans to invite Chamberlin to be its guest in Berlin. Ambassador Schurman today conferred with Foreign Minister tresmann, regarding reception plans.

Plans Circular Sweep.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The Bellanca monoplane which set out from Roosevelt Field this morning for Europe is really bound for Rome, according to confidential advices reaching the United States coast guard headquarters here today from New York.

Admiral Billard, commandant, said he was advised that if Chamberlin, the pilot, finds weather conditions favorable after leaving the Newfoundland coast he will take a circular southern sweep across the Atlantic, and strike Europe along the southern coast of France.

NO WIRELESS ON COLUMBIA

NEW YORK, June 4.—Clarence Chimberlin's monoplane, Columbia, in which he is attempting a non-stop trans-Atlantic flight, is not equipped with wireless, it was officially announced in a broadcast sent out today. The message was addressed to all ships at sea, all coast radio stations and to commercial wireless concerns in Europe.

Mayor Asks Old Pay

expect also to be a candidate to succeed myself this November, I hesitate to take an aggressive stand against this measure and bow to the dictates of your honorable body. Council must assume full responsibility for this measure.

"You have based your arguments for a reduction of salary on the fact that this city now has a municipal court and the mayor has no court duties. This is very true, but I am sure that an average of 30 minutes each day would do all police court work. You must also remember that when the mayor had the police court work, he received some fees from trial cases which made up a part of his compensation.

"During the year 1926, I collected in licenses, permits, etc., the sum of $1,946.71 or about $750 more than was ever collected before. I also added through a thorough check on all new buildings over $500,000 to the tax duplicate of this city. At the rate of 23 mills this will bring in each year $11,500. Now this was not done by sitting in an office but rather by aggressive work and a complete check on all work.

"For your information on this subject I am giving you in detail the facts on this subject from other cities in this state, just for comparison. The city of Bellaire, with a population of 15,000, has no court and pays the mayor $1,300. Marietta, with a population of 15,000, no court, pays $1,800 per year. The city of Barberton, population 18,000, no court, pays the mayor $2,800. Mansfield has no court, population 27,000, and pays $3,600 per year.

"Steubenville has a population of 28,000, no court, and pays $2,800. It is also very probable that this will be increased before next year. Massillon has a population of 17,000, a municipal court, and pays $2,400. It is also very probable that this will be increased.

"Ashtabula has a city manager form of government, has a municipal court, a population of 22,000, and pays the city manager $5,000 per year. Niles has no court, population 13,000 and pays $3,100. Zanesville has a municipal court, population 29,000, and pays $2,000 per year. Wellsville, population 9,000, no court, pays $1,500 per year.

"Alliance with a population of 21,000 pays the mayor $3,000 per year. A municipal court was established nine years ago and after it was established the salary of the mayor was increased. With the establishment of the court the mayor lost fees from trial cases, which formerly made up a part of his compensation.

"From the above you can see that East Liverpool with a population of 24,000 will pay their mayor the sum of $1,2000 per year which is less than the salary paid by any other city enumerated. I feel that it is mend that your ordinance committee be instructed to bring in another ordinance raising the salary to the old figure of $1,800 per year.

state should have a tax system precisely like that of every other state, but he does maintain that there must be some one general plan best suited for use in all states, a general plan to be modified and adapted according to the peculiar conditions existing in a given state.

He points out that about the only feature common to all state tax laws now is the general property tax, but even in that an utter lack of uniformity is found. In some state little effort is given to the assessment of tangible personal property. Some states try to tax intangible personal property at the general property rate, others employ a low rate of tax on intangibles, and others have resorted to income taxation as the best method of reaching intangibles. In Rhode Island, banks pay no tax on their shares, their capital, or their income; in Colorado, shares are taxed at the general property rate. In between these two extremes, financial institutions are taxed in the various states in different ways and at greatly varying rates.

To bring about a measure of uniformity, Mr. Graves says it will be necessary to establish and decide what the principal taxable abilities what the auxiliary sources of revenue should be, and the relatives amount of state and local revenue which should be exacted from each ability and each auxiliary source.

Then standard laws should be prepared for each tax, including the best administrative provisions, and after that would come the job of persuading 48 state legislatures to enact all or the more important of them.

Mr. Graves admits that it is rather an ambitious program.

Roped Men Battle Rocks.

BE IN CHURCH SUNDAY

"The Imminent God," Sermon By Rev. Donald W. MacLeod

Plaintive Cry of Job in Deep Despair After Tragedy Followed Tragedy is Discussed by Pastor of East Liverpool's First Presbyterian Church.

"O That I Knew Where I Might Find Him." Job 23:3.

This is the plaintive outcry of a man in deep despair. Job had experienced overwhelming reverses. Tragedy followed tragedy in swift succession, so that in the brief space of one day his property is swept away, his children are killed, and he himself is smitten with a loathsome disease.

"Sorrows crown of sorrows" in his case was that he could conceive no reason why such a succession of calamities should be allowed to overtake him. The belief of his age was that God presided over the destinies of men, and in the operation of a just and kindly providence meted out to each as he deserved. If men turned their backs on Him and lived wicked lives sooner or later, misfortune overtook them; and if they lived righteously the Almighty smiled on them, and they prospered.

But whatever truth that theory might contain, it neither comforted Job, nor offered a satisfying interpretation of his case, for he was not conscious of any wrong doing which would merit such overwhelming calamities as had overtaken him. He feels that the Almighty has treated him with deliberate injustice, and he would like the Almighty to explain.

But where is the Almighty to be found? Where is His dwelling place that he may come and plead his cause before Him? Up to this time Job believed that God was in direct contact with the world, exercising His sway over all nature and all mankind. But now that faith is gone, gone because his experience contradicted it, for he reasoned that if God, the watchful Creator, had anything to do with the history of human lives such a series of painful reverses would not have overtaken him.

When he looked into the experience of others he saw no more evidence of the overrulings of a just and benificent providence than there was in his own. The dark mystery which shadowed hisl ife shadowed every other human life. He saw around him a world without any manifest tokens of moral purpose and order. Wrong remained unredressed; evil went unpunished; the tyrant sat on his throne and the innocent were crushed under the heel of His pitiless oppression. He reasoned that such injustice and suffering would not be allowed if God were in direct control of human life.

Baffled and confused, not knowing where in His boundless domain God hid Himself he cries out: "O that I knew where I might find Him."

This bitter outcry touches a responsive chord in countless hearts today. As a matter of fact, it articulates the supreme religious problem of this age, as, perhaps, it was the supreme religious problem of every past age—the problem of the whereabouts of God.

In our day there are few; if any persons of intelligence who deny the existence of th eSupreme Being. Even scientific deductions are today postulated on the supposition of a creative mind. But while the fact of God's existence is almost universally acknowledged, men say that they do not know where to find Him. They do not know where He keeps Himself. They cannot see that He is here, or this would be a different world. The thought of His presence does not harmonize, in their way of looking at it, with the injustice and wickedness, the sorrow and suffering they see in human life.

"There is a God," Carlyle is said to have exclaimed in a dark hour in his life, "but He does nothing!" That, I suppose, is substantially what Job thought when he gave utterance to the passionate cry of our text; and it is what thousands since his day have thought, and thousands are thinking today, although they may not have the hardihood to blurt it out as fearlessly and forcibly as Carlyle did.

Such attitude of mind let me say has its source in a wrong conception of God—the conception that He is a transcendent being, dwelling in some remote place above the clouds and the stars. And that nature runs of itself, propelled by the laws He established for it. He Himself is outside of it, and not in touch with its multiplied operations, excepting as occasionally he breaks in to perform a miracle, to inaugurate a great movement, or to answer a prayer. That is the idea of God we cherished when we were children.

It is well if we have outgrown it, for it is a false idea, and one which offers very little comfort to those who are struggling to make this a better world. What they need is not a God who dwells above the stars separated from His creation, but a God who is here, here with his people, sharing their burdens and sorrows, in the thick of every battle for righteousness, not simply trying to get all on earth to heaven, but to get some of heaven down to earth. And that is the God which both science and the Bible proclaims. Nature according to them is no mere machine operated by the energy of cold mechanical laws. Back of its all-perfect laws they affirm is a living will. The transcendent God they declare is also the imminent God.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH PASTOR

Rev. D. W. MacLeod, D. D.

He is transcendent only in the qualities of His character, and not in the place of His abode or in the sphere of his activities.

And as God is in all the operations of nature, so also is He in the events of human life, not any more in the unusual and miraculous than He is in the ordinary and commonplace events of life, and ever working for the good of His children.

To say that is merely to articulate the uniform message of God's word, and to reaffirm the very central truth of the teaching of Jesus.

The God whom Jesus revealed was no being enthroned above the dim distances of the stars. He took God out of the remote where men's thoughts had placed Him, and he brought Him down to earth. He spoke of Him as the ever-present God, present in nature, guiding the planets in their flight, decking the hill sides with beauty, giving its purity to the lily and its blush to the rose; present in the life of the frailest creature, seeing after the insect which dances in the sunbeam, watching the birds on the housetop and guarding the sparrows in their flight so that not one falls to the ground without his notice; present in human life, in every joy and sorrow, in every failure and success, in every joy and sorrow, in every failure and success, in every pulse of health and every throb of pain, making the sun to rise on the evil and the good, and sending his rain upon the just and the unjust.

Jesus never viewed this as an orphaned world, nor ever exclaimed as Job did: "Oh that I knew where I might find him!" He always knew where God was. He knew that God was here. He traced his footsteps in the verdant fields, saw the touch of his hand in the beauty of the flowers, heard the whisper of his voice in the fanning breeze.

What indeed was He himself but God incarnate—God down here, God in the vestments of human flesh, God in the crowd, God looking after the sick, cheering the lonely, comforting the sorrowing, reclaiming the outcast, supporting the weak, subduing the evil, and releasing redemptive forces which would finally purify the stream of human history and make this a more wholesome and attractive world.

How then is this truth to be reconciled with all that is so grimly dark and tragic in human life? How about pain and sorrow? There existence is no proof that God is absent from human life, for pain and suffering are not essentially evil, they are benificent in their effects. They are the most effective instrumnts which God uss in the development of the human soul. His only begotten Son was made perfect through suffering, and that is the only way any soul can be made perfect.

God therefor is too vitally interested in the immortal well being of men to withhold even the most extreme ordeal of suffering if it is necessary to the soul's expansion and beauty and its development into the likeness of Christ. Consequently there is no "sparing men the process," as Browning says,, and the fact that there is no sparing of the process is the most conclusive and assuring proof that God is here, and in imminent and sympathetic touch with human life.

Recently I came across an anonymous poem which throws a flood of light on the problem of human pain and sorrow:

"The cry of man's anguish went up unto God:
Lord, take away pain—
The shadow that darkens the world thou hast made,
The close coiling chain
That strangles the heart, the burden that weighs
On the wings that would soar—
Lord, take away pain from the world thou hast made,
That it love Thee the more!

Then answered the Lord to the cry of His world:
Shall I take away pain,
And with it the power of the soul to endure,
Made strong by the strain?
Shall I take away pity that knits heart to heart,
And sacrifice high?
Will ye loose all your heroes that lift from the fire white brows to the sky?
Shall I take away love, that redeems with a price
And smiles at its loss?
Can ye spare from your lives, that would climb into mine,
The Christ on His cross."

Another fact which some cannot reconcile with belief in an imminent God is the existence of moral evil. If He is here, they ask, why does He permit it to exist Why does He allow truth to remain forever on the scaffold and wrong forever on the throne? Why does He not lay bare His holy arm and with one sweep of omnipotence clean the earth of its hoary iniquities?

All such questions have their origin in a very prevalent but false idea about God—the idea that God being omnipotent can do what He desires. Omnipotence, however, is not the power to do all things, but the power to do all possible things. There are some things that God cannot do, and one of them is to compel a free moral agent to do what he does not want to do.

God cannot make men good by force. He cannot change the world against its will. His heart bleeds for this world. The world's evil and cruelty and bloodshed does not worry and pain any mortal as it pains God. If He could He would sweep those things out fo existence in an instant of time. But He can effect a moral change only as humanity cooperates with Him as men open their hearts to Him, follow His guidance, and are willing to be the instruments of His power.

For the want of that cooperation moral progress makes slow advance, and God cannot do what He would like to do. But God is here, and busy at work, and the forces of evil are gradually yielding to His kingdom's sure increase—

"Where the vanguard rests today
The rear will rest tomorrow."

We may not be able to see the evidence of His presence in our age, but that does not prove that He is not here. Ages, like mountains, need a distant perspective to show what went on in them and what they accomplished. We are today sufficiently far from the age in which Carlyle thought that God was doing nothing to determine how much truth was in his hasty remark. We find that he was sadly mistaken. At that very moment the dawn of a new day was flushing the Eastern sky. Christian nations were waking to the iniquity of slavery. Lincoln was signing the Emancipation proclamation, which struck the chains from the limbs of a million slaves. Wesley was freeing England from its corrupting deism, and laying the foundations of the great Methodist Church. The soldiers of the Grand Army of the Republic in the hot fires of countless battlefields were welding this.

And the age in which we are living, of which so many speak in despairing terms, for they can see no evidence of divine activity in it, is nevertheless a great, divine age. In the perspective of future years it wil be seen to be one of the supreme creative epochs of human history.

You who have been saying: "Oh that I knew where I might find him, that I might come even to his seat," look around you. He is here, in your life and mine, in the events of each individual life and in the history of peoples and nations, hastening onward, as fast as human wilfulness will allow the far-off divine event to which the whole creation moves. He is an Imminent God!

Speak to Him, then, for He hears,
And spirit with spirit can meet,
Closer is He than breathing,
And nearer than hands or feet."

Intolerance Still Rages In Cleopatra's Gift City

Romantic Jaffa, Palestine's Port, City of Peter, Jonah, Crusaders, Napoleon and Other Celebrities, Where Bitter Struggle Between Races and Religions Continues Unabated.

By William T. Ellis.

Concrete geography may help make abstract truth real. Indeep, there are usually place considerations in public issues, such as the race question. Today's Lesson brings us face to face with the current problem of religious and racial tolerance. So let us first get a glimpse of where it all happened.

Peter has no monopoly of the fame of Joppa, the modern Jaffa, scene of the Lesson. Once this was literally Queen Cleopatra's City, a gift to her from Mark Anthony. Earlier it was Jonah's point of embarkment. More history has been crowded into this heaped-up habitation, one of the oldest in the world, than any teacher will be able to set forth. The Crusaders, Napoleon and Allenby, all wrote notable pages. Today it is a pivotal spot in the conflict between the Zionists and Arabs of Palestine. Cheek by jowl with it has risen lately, on the sand dunes to the north, built by American gifts, the modern all-Jewish city, of Tel-Aviv, where the problems, and perils of Zionism are concentrated.

Just outside of Jaffa, to the east, stand two memorials to Dorcas, whom Peter raised from the dead. One is a Christian and one is a Moslem shrine. A little further to the east, ancient Lydda, where Peter healed Aneas, the palsied man, is now Lud, the greatest railway junction in Palestine, where tourists from Egypt change cars for Jerusalem. Hard by, at Ramleh, is the tomb of St. George of the Dragon, the patron saint of England, who really was a fourth century Roman officer, and a Christian martyr. Up the coast from Jaffa, beyond Acre, lies Caesarea, now malaria-ridden, but in Peter's day a Roman capital where dwelt Cornelius, the centurion; and where later Paul was tried and sent to Rome.

A Present Issue That is Old.

In some respects, two thousand years seems to have taught the world little. My Jewish driver from Tel Avid was cursed in the streets of Jaffa, a year ago; and, similarly, my Arab driver from Jaffa met black looks and traffic annoyances in Tel-Avis. Intolerance is just as keen as it was in Peter's days and not in Palestine alone.

Most interesting and least pleasant of all the human figures to be seen in Jerusalem today are the orthodox Polish Jews, dressed in long velvet gowns and round hats, with greasy locks, and curls hanging down in front of their ears. They all seem underfed and underbathed. Yet they are the proudest people in the city, looking with contempt upon less orthodox Jews, and upon unbelievers. They embody the attitude of the Apostle Peter, when he was given his vision on the housetop of Simon the Tanner.

To this day, the Holy Land is the home of religious and racial strife. Our new western world is spacious-minded and tolerant in comparison; we have scarcely an analogy for the state of mind of the Apostle Peter, who would not eat certain foods forbidden by the Mosaic Law, and would not even carry the Good News of his risen Saviour to those outside of the Jewish nation, until taught by a vision, an angel, a special providence and a Divine outpouring.

That real religion is not ritual; that it is not dress of shibboleths or particular practices, is one of the hardes lessons for man to learn. A venerable and interesting Jew from Chicago, returned to the Holy Land to spend the end of his life, whom I met a year ago at the Wailing Place of the Jews in Perusalem, and who was notably catholic in his religious views, declared to me, "I tell you, if Christianity had adopted the Jewish dietary laws and the Jewish Sabbath, it would have swept the world." Despite his liberalism, this free-thinking Jew reverted to incidental prescriptions and proscriptions in this conception of religion. He would vote it a sorry day for Christianity when Peter saw and obeyed his vision! Each one of the many, many branches of the Christian church has similar peculiar limitations, some of them pathetically petty. A study of the history of American denominations affords a revelation of the capacity of good people for magnifying the non-essential.

A Good Man Out of the Fold.

God's clocks all strike in tune. While hungry Peter on his Joppa housetop was having his vision of a sheet let down from heaven containing all manner of living creatures to be eaten; up in Caesarea, a devout Roman centurion, not a Christian, was having a vision bidding him send to Joppa for Peter. This synchronization of providences, common in the experience of all devout persons, is an everyday evidence that One is ruling over all. The common meeting place of hopes and hearts is God. He who prepares the field also makes ready the force. With the need He provides the succor.

Because hunger is,
Bread needs must be."

How many times we are kept from stumbling in our souls, or heartened in a hard task, because distant dear ones are praying for us. Before ever science began to talk about telepathy or the wireless, the wonderful will of God was operating simultaneously near and far.

Our hero in these Lessons is Peter; but today we need also to get a firm hold of Cornelius the centurion. He represents the man who does not belong to our church, but who also seeks our God. What a multitude of these questing spirits there are in our time, unlabelled, unaffiliated, unorganized, but still the seeking servants of the Most High. Ours is notably the era of the spiritual quest. Especially outside of the churches there are an uncounted multitude of persons who are deeply concerned with religious questions. Their reverence, humility and teachableness are sure signs of the genuineness of their souls' thirst. We hail them as friends of God; and long for new Peters to show them that all their desires are fulfilled in Christ.

"Follow Your Gleam"

It took an angel from heaven to crack the crust of Peter's prejudices and orthodoxy; but once he saw the light, he went all the way, and journeyed up the coast to Caesarea. Similarly, when Cornelius had a vision, he followed it. Two men of action were these visionaries, ready to follo their gleam to the uttermost. Out of that loyalty came young Christianity's great revelation of the largeness of the Gospel which had been given to it. No barriers of race or creed should survive within the fellowship of the Church. Christianity, it was thus taught, was no mere glorified Judaism, but a universal faith, knowing no distinction between Jew and Gentile.

"For the love of God is broader,
Than the measure of man's mind;
And the heart of the Eternal
Is most wonderfully kind."

When Vision-obeying Peter came to Vision-obeying Cornelius, he opened his mouth and said, "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respector of persons; but in every nation he that feareth Him, and worketh righteousness, is acceptable to HIM." That does not sound like the Peter of the housetop, professing his ritualistic loyalty, does it? Ah, he had learned as he had gone on: by obedience had come light. Between Joppa and Caesarea he had pondered the meaning of his message; and so he dared to state this tremendous new truth of tolerance. Verily, it is a truth for our times that the Sunday Schools are studying today.

Then fell the Wonder. Upon that company of Gentiles and Jews, in the house of the Roman centurian, descended the mysterious Holy Spirit, with the same signs that had attended Pentecost. Peter dared follow his

Juvenile Bible Study

One question for each day is provided. The parent will find it interesting and helpful to have the child take up the question each day and aid it in finding the answer in the Scriptures, thus developing a knowledge of the Bible and where to find in it the things decided. Send or bring the little folks to the class Sunday at 1:45 p. m. The "Ceramic Cafeteria Auditorium," 121 West Fifth Street.

674. What did the Lord, through Daniel, tell us would happen during, or at, the close of "the time of the end?"

Answer: "There shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time." —Daniel 12:1.

675. Did our Lord Jesus tell us anything about this "time of trouble?"

Answer: Yes, you will find it in Matthew 24.21, which reads: "For then shall be great tribulation (trouble) such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no nor ever shall be (again)."

676. How severe is this "time of trouble" or "tribulation" to be?

Answer: See next verse (22) which reads: 'And except those days should be shortened there should be no flesh saved."

677. Are they to be shortened so that "all flesh" (human beings) should not be destroyed?

Answer: Yes; for the last of the verse (22) says: "But for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened."

678. When does Daniel say that this great time of trouble should begin?

Answer: See first part of Daniel 12:1, where we are told that it will begin when Michael stands up.

679. Who is Michael?

Answer: The word Michael means "who as God" and therefore signifies the Mighty One who, acting for Jehovah, will establish the long-promised kingdom on earth, for which we have been praying for nineteen hundred years, saying, "Thy kingdom come; they will be done in earth as it is done in heaven."

680. Is there any other expression that would confirm our thought that Michael means Jesus Christ?

Answer: Yes; for it says (Daniel 12:1): "Michael, the great prince." Prince means the son of a king, or one acting for the king. "The great price" therefore means the son of the great King of the universe. See Daniel 9:25, where it states that 'the prince" is "the Messiah"—Christ.

gleam to the uttermost; so he declared, in defiance of all precedent, "Can any man forbid the water, that these should not be baptized, who have received the Holy Spirit, as well as we? And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ."

Later Peter was held to an accounting by the Church at Jerusalem for this radical liberalism; but his unanswerable reply was, "Who was I, that I could withstand God?" That day marked the beginning of the practice of universality in the Christian Church; and its message of tolerance is still the teaching for our own times.

New Cumberland

Alumni dance and dinner with the graduating class as honor guests was held in the Community house Saturday evening. The hall was attractfully decorated in the high school colors blue and white. The tables were arranged with spring flowers. Places were arranged for one-hundred and forty guests. James E. Brandon of the class of 1898 was toast-master. Addresses were made by Mrs. Alfred Achenheil, of Pittsburgh, of the class of 1893, the first class which was graduated from the high school, Senator W. S. Wilkin of Wellsburg; Francis Ward of Cleveland; Robert Cassiday of Toronto; Paul Wern of this year's class and Attorney Edmund Marshall of Huntington, Supt. of Schools C. D. Henderson and Attorney R. M. Brown, and a vocal solo by Robert Douglass of Chester accompanied by Mrs. Douglass at the piano. Dinner was served by the ladies of the Community club. The Collegiate orchestra furnished the music.

Dr. and Mrs. Raymond Mercer of Akron, spent the week-end with the latter's father, S. G. Young and the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. D. Mercer of Holliday's Cove.

Mrs. M. N. Price is visiting Mr. and Mrs. H. E. McGonagle of Cleveland, O.

The following members of the 1927 graduating class of the local high school left Monday morning for a five-day trip to Washington, D. C. They were accompanied by Miss Mary Love of the faculty. "TEMPTRESS" AT AMERICAN

Greta Garbo Plays Title Role in Ibanez Story.

Research that covered almost the entire globe was necessary in the production of the sensational new Cosmopolitan spectacle "The Temptress," sensational novel of Paris and South America, will be shown Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the American theatre as one of the big features of the season.

Laid in European cities, Buenos Aires and the wilds of South America; the range in scenic design and costuming, types of actors and methods of characterization proved enormous; the production was staged at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studies on a gorgeous scale, and directed by Fred Niblo.

Greta Garbo, the famous Swedish screen beauty, appears in the title role as "Elena," the Parisian charmer, whose charms wreck the lives of all men who come under her uncanny spell, and Antonio Moreno plays "Lobledo," the South American engineer, who survives her enchantments.

Cast is Notable.

The cast is a notable one, including Lionel Barrymore, the famous stage and screen player, who has contributed many well known characterizations to the screen; Roy D'Arcy, the famous "crown prince" of "The Merry Widow," Kathleen Key, the "Tirzah" of "Ben-Hur," Alys Murrell, Armand Kaliz, Inez Gomez, Antonio D'Algy and other players of note.

A sensational duel with bull whips, after the manner of the plainsmen of South America, is staged by Antonio Moreno and Roy D'Arcy, who, stripped to the waist, slash at each other in the most terrible form of duel known; the wreck of a huge dam in the Andes is another sensational spectacle in the big production.

Glittering revels in the cafes of Paris and in the gay resorts of Buenos Aires furnish kaleidoscopic spectacle to contrast with the grim battles in the tropic wilderness.

Dorothy Farnum, scenarist of "The Torrent," scenarized the new story from Ibanez' novel.

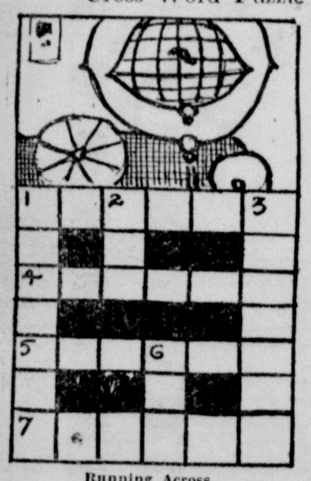

Bengal Bandits Behead Two.

Bandits used high-power methods in a hold-up at the railway station at Saharse, Bengal, recently. A party of business men had come from the interior to sell elephants at the Singhesivar Mela, which is held every year during the celebration of the Sivaratri festival. They were waiting at night for the train to return home when one of the bandits rang the station bell, and passengers, including two companions of the party, rushed to the ticket office to buy tickets. Then 30 armed bandits surrounded the elephant dealers and snatched all their purses, containing $11,000 in cash. In the battle that followed two of the dealers were beheaded and three others seriously injured. During the struggle all passengers fled and the stationmaster bolted his door. An investigation of the hold-up is being made by government officials.

Decrees Handed Down Yesterday by Judge W. F. Lones.

Six decrees of divorce were granted yesterday by Judge W. F. Lones in common pleas court.

The court has also ordered the defendant to pay $150 alimony within 60 days, and if not paid by that time all arrearage is to be paid. In addition to this order, the court has also instructed Weaver to pay his former wife $25 per week alimony for the support of minors, the custody of the latter having been awarded the plaintiff. This action has been pending in common pleas since July 20th last.

On the grounds of gross neglect of duty, Maude Angle has obtained a decree of divorce from Carl Angle. A decree for alimony has been entered as agreed upon, and the plaintifff is to pay the costs in the case.

Extremely cruelty and gross neglect of duty was set up in the divorce petition filed by Wanda Bowland against her husband Thomas Bowland, March 23rd last, and when the case went to trial without contest the allegations were sustained. The plaintiff in this action has been restored to her maiden name Wanda Allman.

Marie Alberts has been granted a divorce from her husband, George Alberts on the grounds of gross neglect of duty and extreme cruelty. She has also been restored to her maiden name, that of Marie Wallace. Costs in the case have been paid by the plaintiff.

A decree was granted the plaintiff on the grounds of extreme cruelty, An order of alimony has been entered.

Gross neglect of duty was charged in the petition for divorce filed April 13th last, by Adolph Sarmofsky against his wife, Kate Sarmofsky, and after a brief hearing in which the usual number of witnesses were examined a decree was granted the plaintiff.

State Health Board To Probe Pollution Of County Streams

Pollution of the waters of Bull creek in Middleton township, which in turn has polluted the waters of Big Beaver creek in both Middleton and St. Clair townships has been reported to the state board of health, and a special representative of the state board is to arrive in Lisbon Monday to conduct an exhaustive investigation.

This pollution has been traced to the abandoned Townsend coal mine near Rogers which is now being drained, and this water is being allowed to flow into Bull and Big Beaver Creeks.

Farmers have been unable to water their stock from the waters of these streams. Deputy Game Warden L. W. Boring has reported to the department of agriculture that thousands of fish in these streams have been killed.

Water is now flowing from the abandoned mine in a four-foot stream, and it is said that it will require about a month to drain the mine.

Telegrams have been sent to Columbus complaining about the pollution, and the matter has also been referred to the county board of health, which will act in conjunction with the state department of health and state department of agriculture.

BOWLING GREEN PASTOR TO SPEAK

Rev. Paul Gilbert, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Bowling Green, will have charge of the morning service tomorrow at the Lisbon Presbyterian church. There will be no evening service. The pulpit committee of this church has not extended a call to any minister to fill the pulpit made vacant by the resignation of the Rev. P. W. Macaulay. Those ministers who have been in the pulpit of late are known as supplies.

Divorce Action Dismissed.

The divorce action that has been pending in common pleas court since May 27 last year, wherein Rachael Howard sought a decree from her husband B. Frank Howard has been dismissed. This was on the motion of the plaintiff, and at her costs. No record is to follow.

Dundee Crowned Welter Champ In Decision Over Pete Latzo

Title Holder Falls Before Challenger's Telling Body Blows

Scranton Coal Miner, Weakened by Drying Out for Weight Limit Requirements, Goes Down Fighting, Unable, Though, to Stand Pace.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Since the day of Napoleon—the one who wasn't in a padded cell—it has been a generally accepted fact that an army moves on its stomach but last night at the Polo grounds it was discovered for the first time that it is possible to travel to a world's championship on another man's kidneys. Baltimore supplied the traveler in Joe Dundee but Pete Latzo, of Scranton, Pa., supplied the kidneys and that was the only mistake he made.

In consequence of this exchange of courtesies, Dundee today was the new welterweight champion of the world and Latzo merely one of the boys again, a fighter with a past. It was a great fight and a fair decision, although close enough to force Dundee to carry the fifteenth and last round in order to get it.

Latzo died with his boots on, as a real fighting man must. He had to undergo devastating punishment before he ever put foot in the ring in order to whittle himself down to limit of 147 pounds and, according to a story at the ringside, had to receive the ministrations of a physician because it was alleged the weight reduction had impaired his kidneys.

Dundee at Heights.

Baltimore had sent its third world's champion into the archives of ring greatness.

In case there may be a waning doubt of the matter, let it be said that Dundee approached real greatness last night. He, of course, knew not the greatness that was Gans', Baltimore's first and best, but his pedestal today was no lower than that which was occupied by Kid Williams, the third champion.

As a matter of fact, only a man approaching greatness could have beaten Latzo last night. The latter was toppled from the throne but as he fell he went down swinging and the result was one of the best championship fights seen here under the modern code.

They started like a pair of prize waltzers, apparently content to feel each other out. Latzo carried the first two rounds on aggressiveness alone, the action being tepid and the wrestling something fierce. The third was even, Dundee going to work with his right to the kidneys and that tell-tale, whitewashed look appeared in the vicinity of Latzo's eyes.

The body punishment got him altogether in the fourth and, except for one long left to the jaw, the coal miner hardly landed a punch. It was Dundee and his right to the kidneys all the way and the fifth round was much the same, only more so.

Kidneys Tell on Latzo.

As they came out for the sixth, Latzo's attitude showed that he meant to get his man early or admit that it wasn't in him. He swarmed all over Joseph, swinging left and rights as fast as he could get them going and bulled his way to the round on points. He carried the seventh the same way, led at the way through the eighth and, toward the end of the round, hurt Joe badly with a left to the body and a right to the jaw.

But, just when everything looked good, Latzo was overtaken by his kidneys again and Dundee came out for the ninth to take the play away from Pete and he did. Joe was the man who was doing all the crowding and punching now. He was a mile ahead on points when Latzo swung a left and right out of nowhere, clipped that trick jaw with both and Dundee's knees did an accordian act.

He won the round, however, and the tenth and eleventh also, landing his best punch of the fight in the latter, a left hook to the jaw that sent Latzo into a semi-collapse against the ropes, but Pete came back fighting and just at the bell sent over a right that did Dundee almost no good. Nor did an accidental butt over Latzo's eye help the latter a great deal.

The twelfth saw Latzo take charge again. And how he plied Dundee with lefts to the body and jaw and then crossed a right that made Dundee blink rapidly and cover up. Just before the bell, a left hook to Dundee's jaw almost settled him again.

Makes Great Finish.

Each fought the thirteenth as though it was the last round of his life and there was nothing to choose between them at the end. But Latzo was mortally tired now, his punches lacked the snap of the early rounds and his movements became aimless and inert.

It was Dundee's great moment, the chance for a winning sprint in the last 100 yards, and he made the most of it. Crowding, forcing, feinting and swinging in a bewildered maze of movement, he clipped and hooked and smashed Latzo about the ring during a left hook in the fourteenth and again with a left and right in the final the last two rounds, hurting him with round, tossed at Latzo just as the latter caught his hands in the ropes.

Latza wasn't out-gamed; he was outfinished, that tells the story; that, the flying fists of a man who knew his kidneys.

TURK NASH BLANKED, 2-0

Digman Allows Two Hits as Laughlin Wins.

Unable to hit while their opponents twice bunched a couple of safe drives for as many runs, Turk-Nash sustained a second successive shutout from Lauhglin in City Industrial league contest at Newell park last evening. The score was 2 to 0. The result places Laughlin and Chester in first place, each having lost one and won seven games.

Digman, twirling for Laughlin, all b t duplicated Ashe's performance of the day before at Columbian park when he held the usually heavy hitting autoists to one lone bingle in the final period of play. Not until two men were out in the sixth did a Turk-Nash hitter connect safely with Dignan's slants. Then McConnell drove a double to left, but he got no farther as W. Mundy flew to W. Watson.

Digman allowed but one other hit, a single by Deshler after two men were out in the seventh. He was the twenty-fifth batter facing Digman as was E. Mundy, who made the only bingle off Ashe in the Thursday clash between the clubs. McConnell, making the first of these two hits was the twenty-first swatter to receive the Didman curves.

Despite the making of but three safe drives in two days as against 13 by Laughlin in the two contests Turk-Nash fought gamely all the way. The game thus abounded in thrills with both clubs contributing flashes in the playing.

Digman was given almost faultless support, a dropped ball by W. Watson in the fourth off McConnell's bat and a boot by Finley of A. Bayley's drive in the first being the victor's only miscues.

No Turk-Nash player got beyond second base and but five of them even reached fist bast: McConnell twice on a hit and an error, A. Bayley by error, Deshler by a hit and J. Watson by a walk at the outset of the third.

Digman made no effort to strikeout his opponents as he fanned but one—Kinney in the third. He also walked but one player. He depended entirely on fast support and got it.

Wellsville Loses 4 to 3 Decision to Potters.

By a margin of one run, K. T. K. defeated the Wellsville Nash Motors in a City Industrial league contest at Columbian park last evening, 4 to 3.

Howell twirled for the potters and held the down-river batters to six hits. Huffman, for the losers, permitted two less blows, but errors behind him made possible the short end of the scoring by his club.

In the third Howell and Fisher bunched a couple of doubles, the former scoring.

Two more runs were made by K. T. K. in the fourth. An error by D. Morgan put Scullion on. Montgomery reached the paths on a safe drive. Both counted on Kinsey's double to right.

D. Morgan and S. Coleman led both teams in hitting with two hits each in three attempts.

10 WINS FOR SOX HURLER

Thomas First Major Pitcher to Reach Mark This Year.

By Les Conklin.

NEW YORK, June 4. — Alphonse Thomas, sensational young pitcher of the Chicago White Sox, is the first pitcher in the majors to win ten games this season. He has lost only two decisions and should easily better his record of last year when he won 15 games with a second division club.

Thomas beat the Red Sox yesterday, 5 to 1, and Chicago advanced to within 1 1-2 games of the Yankees.

"Tiny" Tavener, of Detroit, who hits only one homer a year in his good years, contributed his 1927 quota yesterday against Pennock of the Yankees and it enabled the Tigers to beat the champions for the first time this season, 3 to 1.

The best pitching exhibition of the day was turned in by Virgil Barnes, of the Giants. He held the Reds to three hits and won in a canter, 6 to 0, putting New York in second place.

Vic Aldridge of the Pirates was almost as effective, limiting the Phillies to four bingles and winning, 11 to 1, as his mates pounded out 15 hits, including three homers.

Stewart, youthful prodigy of the St. Louis Browns, made it four victories out of five starts by subduing the Senators, 8 to 4.

Cleveland got three runs off Jack Quinn in the first inning and then called it a day's work, winning, 3 to 1, behind Lefty Miller's airtight pitching.

The Braves knocked Guy Bush out of the box but barely staggered to the wire ahead of the Cubs, 5 to 4.

Rain held the Robins and Cardinals idle.

Fight's Results.

AT NEW YORK—Joe Dundee, Baltimore, won world's welterweight championship by gaining decision over Pete Latzo, Scranton, Pa., 15 rounds.

George Courtney, Tulsa, Okla., won from K. O. Phila Kaplan, of New York, on foul in second round.

Nick Testo, Troy, N. Y., won decision over George Levine, Brooklyn, 8 rounds.

A curve in the road on the hillside, clear cut against the sky. A tall tree tossed by the Autumn wind and a white cloud riding by. Ten men rode by that picture and all but one passed on; he saw the curve, the tree and the cloud with an artist's mind and eye, and painted it on canvass for the other nine to buy.

WASHINGTON STEWART'S LETTER

MANY FLOOD CONTROL SCHEMES POUR IN ON ENGINEER OFFICERS

By Charles P. Stewart.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Mississippi valley flood control ideas are pouring in on the government in a tide not much less than that of the latest flood itself.

When Maj. Gen. Jadwin gets back from the stricken district to his headquarters, as chief of the army engineers, he'll find his office swamped by them.

Brig. Gen. Deakyne of the rivers and harbors board is up to his neck in a similar inundation.

Secretary Hoover's suite at the commerce department is fairly drowned out with suggestions.

The weather bureau is getting plenty of the overflow.

It will be weeks before the last dotty scheme has been drained off into its appropriate wastebasket.

OF course the engineers and others like to get really practical hints, but some they've received (say about 99 and a fraction per cent) hardly promises to work out, put to the test.

For instance, one proposal calls for a lot of trap doors, "to let the water out."

Obviously this is too vague. Let it out where? The engineers can't figure out whether a double-deck river is meant, or a conduit to carry off the surplus, or what.

ANOTHER man favors powerful pumps to drive the floods into the Gulf of Mexico at a swifter lick. If they don't go on downstream fast enough to make room for a rising river behind, he urges, give 'em a shove.

As an alternative to a push from the rear, another engineer argues for suction—the principle of the tractor in preference to the propellor.

A fourth program contemplates turning the Mississippi's big tributaries, like the Missouri and the Ohio, more directly to the southward, so as to make them empty into the Gulf through mouths of their own, instead of joining the Father of Waters. Expensive, yes!—but think what it would save in flood damages.

Scouring out the Gulf has an advocate. He believes it could be done with compressed air. Simply blow the sand and sediment out of the Gulf's bed into the Atlantic, in a series of gigantic puffs, as you'd blow dust off the piano top by lung power.

QUITE a few authorities hold that the situation would be improved if farmers would plow lengthwise of the river valleys and 'round and 'round the hill, rather than crosswise of the valleys and straight up and down the hills, so as to hold the water in the furrows instead of letting it escape so fast.

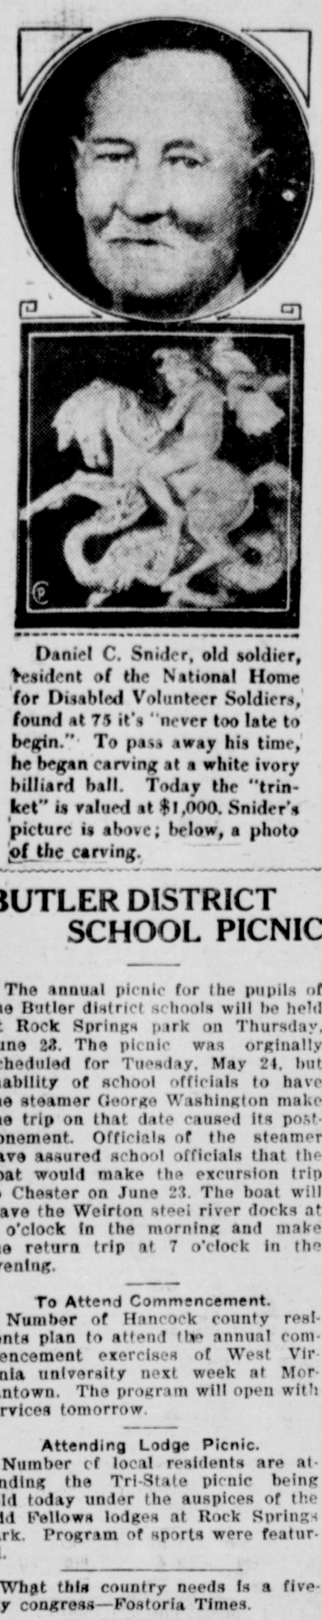

The government engineers, by the way, don't regard this as such a bughouse notion. They say it might not stop floods but it would help.

However, they aren't very hopeful that farmers in regions which aren't subject to floods, and consequently don't care one way or the other, ever can be prevailed on to adopt that method of plowing if it doesn't suit their convenience.

That's where they get a useful tip from some of their volunteer advisors, who want a law passed penalizing any other kind of plowing, with fines and imprisonment.

AT that, there are government engineers who predict that any number of the anti-flood plans they expect to come up in congress next winter will be fully as weird as most of those they're having dumped on them now.

Never Too Late

BUTLER DISTRICT SCHOOL PICNIC

The annual picnic for the pupils of the Butler district schools will be held at Rock Springs park on Thursday, June 23. The picnic was orginally scheduled for Tuesday, May 24, but inability of school officials to have the steamer George Washington make the trip on that date caused its postponement. Officials of the steamer have assured school officials that the boat would make the excursion trip to Chester on June 23. The boat will leave the Weirton steel river docks at 9 o'clock in the morning and make the return trip at 7 o'clock in the evening.

To Attend Commencement.

Number of Hancock county residents plan to attend the annual commencement exercises of West Virginia university next week at Morgantown. The program will open with services tomorrow.

Attending Lodge Picnic.

Number of local residents are attending the Tri-State picnic being held today under the auspices of the Odd Fellows lodges at Rock Springs park. Program of sports were featured.
